Led by the rushing of Franco Harris and an unyielding defensive line anchored by Mean Joe Greene, Pittsburgh Steelers ended 42 years in the National Football League wilderness Sunday by winning the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

The Steelers, who had never won a championship of any kind since entering the league, held Minnesota Vikings to an incredibly minuscule 21 yards on the ground en route to a 16-6 victory. Harris set a Super Bowl record by rushing for 158 yards.

The man who waited the longest was 73-year-old Art Rooney, the Steelers' only owner who said he deserved "very little, if any of the credit," but described the victory as the biggest thrill of his life. Page 10.

It may have been Super Bowl Sunday, but other competitors in other sports performed, too.

Players from the Western Canada Hockey League's eastern and western all-star teams arrived in town for Tuesday night's annual game at Memorial Arena. They all made it in spite of brutal blizzard conditions in Manitoba and Minnesota and will be on hand for tonight's all-star dinner at the Empress Hotel. Page 10.

Johnny Miller, golf's leading money winner with eight tour victories last year, is off and running again. He won the Phoenix Open Sunday by 14 strokes, the biggest margin in tour history, and his 260 total was the lowest 72-hole score in 20 years. Page 11.

ICBC SNOWED UNDER

Five inches of snow was dumped on Greater Victoria Saturday but the fallout is at the Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centre on Douglas Street where personnel are snowed under.

"To say the least, we are swamped," centre manager Jack Bell told the Times today.

Bell urged countless area motorists who experienced minor "fender benders" to wait until the end of the week before filing claims if their vehicles are drivable. He said anyone joining the rush would just have to wait in long lines.

The first major snowstorm of the season vanished as quickly as it appeared when warm temperatures and rain rinsed Victoria streets clean of the white mantle. Up-Island communities, however, are still shovelling themselves out from under as much as 26 inches.

Local streets were clogged with minor accidents which snarled up traffic and left scores of signs and hydro poles scarred by sidesliding motorists when heavy snow fell shortly after noon.

Police departments in the area report few serious accidents while the thaw caused some problems with a rash of minor flooding.

Disruption of B.C. Hydro bus service by stalled motorists led to waits as long as two hours at some stops.

The weather office reports rain which distributed a total of 1.76 inches in the area started about 8 p.m. and besides clearing the snow, topped the rainfall record of 1.52 inches for the day, set in 1935.

A mass of warm Pacific air from the south now affects the southern tip of the Island while a cold Arctic mass remains up-Island.

The rain kept some municipal work crews busy.

GOV'T HOUSING RENTS TO RISE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. government is raising the rent in provincial public housing projects, David Davies, chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission, said today.

Davies said the government intends to raise rent in stages until it reaches 25 per cent of each family's income.

The increases may be more than the 10.6 per cent allowable under the Landlord and Tenant Act for 1975 but the provincial housing commission is exempt from this rent increase ceiling, he said.

For 1975 the following ceilings will be set on the increases:

—$10 a month for any senior citizen living alone.

—$20 a month for a senior citizen couple, a family on welfare, or a family with one or two wage earners.

—$40 a month for any other family with three or more working people.

FIGHT COSTS EYE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A friendly snowball fight ended Sunday with a 29-year-old man undergoing surgery for the removal of his left eye and the setting of his broken jaw and nose.

Police said Allan M. Costello of Vancouver suffered the injuries after he was hit with a fence picket.

Investigating officers said that during a snowball fight about midnight Saturday night, a snowball hit a car in which Costello and another man were riding.

Witnesses told police the car stopped and a fight developed between the car occupants and members of the youth group.

LONG WAIT was in store for Victoria motorists this morning who took their damaged cars to Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centre at 3300 Douglas. Manager Jack Bell said the centre was "swamped" and urged motorists to come in later this week if their vehicles are still mobile. Scores of minor accidents occurred throughout Greater Victoria after Saturday's snow.

Barrett's Gas Price Plan Unfair—U.S. Senators

SEATTLE — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been urged by two Washington State senators to review natural gas price increases proposed by Premier Dave Barrett.

Senators Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson appealed in a telegram to Kissinger to "stop the unfair treatment" of U.S. natural gas customers and to review existing agreements between Canada and the U.S.

Barrett Friday proposed to Ottawa that the export price of natural gas be increased to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet by the end of 1975.

The senators' telegram said: "These Canadian actions are creating an intolerable burden on U.S. consumers. We desire to maintain the historic spirit of co-operation between the U.S. and Canada but the discriminatory actions by Canadian authorities must be ended."

John McMillan, board chairman of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, said the proposed increase is "a totally unjustified drain on the energy economy of the Pacific Northwest."

McMillan said American and Canadian natural gas users and Canadian gas producers are caught in the middle of a struggle between Barrett and the federal government.

He said that since the struggle over revenues intensified several years ago, Northwest has received only about half the 890 million cubic feet a day of gas for which it has contracted.

Barrett said in an interview following an NDP constituency meeting in Coquitlam Sunday that all the province wants is to charge U.S. customers the same price that they now pay for natural gas from Louisiana.

Thieu Took $7M End-War Bribe

Times News Services
A group of opposition politicians in Saigon said today the United States paid President Nguyen Van Thieu a $7 million bribe to get him to accept the 1973 Vietnam peace agreement.

Congressman Nguyen Van Binh, a spokesman for the politicians, said the charges were contained in a document drafted by South Vietnamese expatriates living in the United States.

Binh said the opposition group had decided to release the lengthy report to the press as "further proof of President Thieu's illegal money activities."

The document, dated Dec. 18, 1972, said Thieu initially balked at a $2 million cash offer and the promise of a villa in Hawaii. He came around when the United States gave another $5 million to "Mrs. Thieu's Charity Fund" and the money was deposited by Thieu and his wife in Basel, Switzerland, it adds.

As tension continued to mount on the war front, the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway left Japan today for an unknown destination, a U.S. Embassy official said in Tokyo. The 51,000-ton Midway out of Yokosuka naval base is believed bound for waters off South Vietnam where the communist forces launched massive offensives recently.

In Phnom Penh, government sources said today U.S. plants have begun an airlift to Phnom Penh to resupply the isolated Cambodian capital with military equipment.

Military sources said the Cambodian high command asked for the emergency airlift after pro-Communist rebel forces cut the Mekong River lifeline at the beginning of their current offensive, New Year's eve.

The United States agreed to meet the Phnom Penh request last Saturday, the sources said, and since then U.S. Air Force C130s, piloted by civilians, have made eight or nine flights to Phnom Penh daily carrying arms and ammunition.

The flights have carried no food because Phnom Penh has enough rice and other food stockpiled to last through a one-month siege, the sources said.

Bazooka Attack Slams Jetliner

Times News Services

PARIS — Two men coolly unwrapped a bazooka from its orange cover today and fired four Soviet-made rockets toward an El Al Boeing 707 jet liner taxiing for takeoff from Orly field with 140 persons aboard.

They missed and hit a Yugoslav airliner that had just landed on a flight from Zagreb.

The steward of the Yugoslav airliner and a French policeman posted at the airport were wounded by fragments of the shell and a hostess aboard the Yugoslav airline's DC9 was treated for shock.

The attack came at 12:30 p.m. Paris time when the Yugoslav plane had just finished unloading passengers upon its arrival from Zagreb, and as the Boeing 707 began to move down the runway for take-off for New York and Toronto.

Sources close to the interior ministry said police were working on the theory the attack was staged by political extremists.

Arab extremists have carried out at least six attacks against El Al planes in recent years.

And, on Jan. 26, 1972 Croatian nationalists opposed to the Tito regime exploded a bomb aboard a Yugoslav plane, killing 26 of the 27 persons aboard.

Police said that on the basis of reports by witnesses two men halted their car, rented in Southern France, on a ramp overlooking the tarmac.

One of them stepped out with a bazooka wrapped in an orange-colored cover and rapidly fired four shells.

One of the shells narrowly missed the El Al jet. One went through the Yugoslav jet and exploded outside under the wing.

A third shell failed to explode and a fourth shell hit and damaged an airfield office which was empty at the time.

"It's a miracle there hasn't been a large number of killed and wounded," one French security forces officer said.

An airfield employee who saw the attackers told police the bazooka recoiled with such force that it threw the man firing it back against his car.

After the second shot the recoil broke the window of the car, police said.

Police said the assailants left the car with two bazookas inside in a sprawling working class suburb close to Orly, and apparently continued in a taxi or a car driven by an accomplice.

An El Al spokesman said: "Our pilot accelerated rapidly as soon as he heard the first shot, which missed. This may have been the reason our plane was not hit after that."

In Beirut, a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization denounced the attack and denied that Arab guerrillas were responsible for it.

DE BECK

Legend Leaves Chamber

A familiar black-gowned figure, frail but proud, will be starkly absent from the usual pomp and circumstance when MLAs file into the chamber of the B.C. Legislature Feb. 18 for the start of the spring session.

Edwin Keary De Beck — but he was known to all as Ned — who walked that route in ceremonial procession so often during his 24 years as clerk of the legislature, died suddenly Sunday night following a brief illness. He was aged 91.

De Beck was virtually a one-man institution in the arena of B.C. politics, his snow-topped head, lined features and twinkling eyes seemingly part of the very furniture itself.

As the man responsible under Mr. Speaker for ensuring that the house was run according to the rules, the authoritative voice on matters of procedure, he was known to and liked by generations of MLAs, pageboys and civil servants.

His birthday, March 7, always fell while the legislature was in session, and it became the custom to honor it with speeches in the house, presentations and special a birthday cake.

But there was special recognition for De Beck's 90th birthday in 1973. He was called to the bar of the house and made a Queen's Counsel, following which a newly-created members' lounge was named in his honor.

Then, as legislators drank his health, the guest of honor, flanked by Premier Barrett and then-Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, cut a huge birthday cake.

Shortly after, De Beck stepped down as clerk of the house although he remained as clerk consultant.

He had first assumed the position in 1949, after retiring at age 65 as superintendent of brokers and inspector of credit unions for the province.

He was a qualified lawyer who had practised in Vancouver before entering government service in 1937.

De Beck, who lived at 2830 Somers Drive, was a woodworker with the skill of a master craftsman. His basement was always crammed with a variety of fine woods from which he turned rings, bowls, goblets and other items.

The funeral service will be held at McCall Bros. chapel, 1400 Vancouver, at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Sask. Power Workers Walk Out

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Power Corp. (SPC) employees who walked off their jobs Saturday voted Sunday to stay out, despite an appeal by Premier Allan Blakeney that they return to work before the province passes legislation forcing them to do so.

Premier Blakeney, at a hastily-called news conference following an emergency cabinet session Saturday, said the legislature will meet Tuesday to pass legislation ordering the 1,200 workers back to work.

SPC facilities, manned by 350 management personnel across the province, were strained to the limit Saturday by 30-below-zero temperatures and windchill factors of down to 110 degrees below zero.

Temperatures climbed to about five below zero Sunday afternoon and the situation improved considerably. Temperatures today are expected to reach about 10 above.

Meanwhile, a striking members of Local 2067, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, worked without pay in many cases of power failures in remote areas to restore service. Alf Hill, local president, said Sunday that about 200 union members returned to work at various times to deal with emergencies.

He said the union has no wish to harm the public and would rather negotiate a settlement than continue the strike.

He added that there is still hope for a negotiated settlement before the workers are ordered back by legislation.

"There has been a line of communication developed between the labor department and ourselves and the labor department and the SPC, and there have been some messages passed back and forth today and Sunday."

ICBC Swamped

A spokesman said the busiest period was from about 2 a.m. to noon Sunday, and they were still tackling isolated mopping-up tasks today.

Many of the flooding problems were caused by water running off roofs and bypassing gutters, but piled up snow at roadsides also sent water pouring into basements, he added.

Slush-plugged catchbasins on many street intersections also had to be cleared.

Because of the slow runoff of snow a Sanich official said the municipality did not have as many cases of flooding as on other occasions.

"Two or three drainage crews were out Sunday and we received about 85 calls," he said.

In Oak Bay, municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White said there were five to 10 scattered cases of flooding reported, mostly affecting basements.

Few calls were reported in Esquimalt.

the weather

Following Sunday's storm, skies are mostly cloudy across B.C. with some precipitation reported mainly on the north coast and along the continental divide. A few clear periods are occurring in the central interior this morning. Variable amounts of cloud will prevail over B.C. today and Tuesday while a weather system across the northwestern United States will bring a little precipitation from time to time over southwestern B.C.

WOODWARD... Mill Bay beckons

Alberta Doggy Man Joins Mother Cecilia

Two famous animal lovers will join forces this week at the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter in Mill Bay.

George Woodward, 64-year-old Alberta pensioner evicted from his rented farmhouse two months ago because he owned more than 100 dogs, is moving here to join Mother Cecilia, the 85-year-old nun who runs the shelter.

Woodward has been living in the Salvation Army men's hostel since his eviction from the farmhouse at Didsbury, 40 miles north of Calgary.

He wrote Mother Cecilia a few weeks ago asking if she needed help caring for the more than 500 animals at the shelter.

"He sounds like just the kind of man I need," she said in a telephone interview.

"I have a lot of trouble finding people who really love animals."

Woodward will clean, feed and care for the animals at the shelter, in return for room and board and a small salary. Mother Cecilia said if the arrangement works out, he will eventually be asked to become manager of the shelter.

Woodward will bring with him the only three dogs he has left, now staying with former neighbors in Didsbury.

His other dogs were destroyed following his eviction.

Mother Cecilia and her four assistants provide homes for lost and abandoned animals, as well as a boarding service and a small pet cemetery.

When Bishop Remi De Rio ordered her to close the shelter several years ago she refused, saying her work with animals was "God's work, a work of mercy."

Third Day of Raiding Over Lebanese Border

BEIRUT (UPI) — Israeli artillery, armor, and commandos struck across the border into southern Lebanon today and fought fierce battles with Lebanese soldiers and Palestinian guerrillas for the third straight day.

Israeli planes made high-flying passes over the city proper, sending sonic booms rumbling across the capital, witnesses said.

The Lebanese defence ministry said Israeli gunners hit several villages with heavy artillery fire during the night while a ground task force crossed the border to blow up five houses in Halta and Chouba, one mile inside Lebanon.

In Tel Aviv, the military command said its troops raided Chouba and shot several guerrillas but did not know whether any were killed.

The raiders charged a house where guerrillas were firing and blew it up, according to Tel Aviv sources. They also blew up four houses in Halta believed used by guerrillas.

Lebanese artillery shelled the Israeli forces and other Israeli positions "but enemy losses were not immediately known," the Lebanese said. Israel said one of its soldiers were wounded.

In Kuwait, the newspaper Al Siyassah said today the United Arab Emirates ignored a request by president Gerald Ford asking for permission to allow the U.S. Navy to use two of its coastal islands for military exercises.

The request was made a few weeks ago while U.S. naval units visited the Persian Gulf region, the newspaper said, but it did not name the islands.

Libyan Leader Col. Moammar Khadafi said today his country was ready to aid Lebanon in bolstering its defences against Israeli attacks.

In an interview with the Beirut newspapers An Nahar and L'Orient, Khadafi said Libya was prepared to help Lebanon build fortified villages on its frontier along the lines of the Kibbutzim, the Israeli communal settlements, but he gave no further details.

He said Libya was awaiting the go-ahead from Lebanon to put its plan into action.

Pharmacare Tab $14.9 Million

Nearly 3.5 million prescriptions were covered under Pharmacare last year for a total cost to the provincial government of $14.94 million.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi today announced the results of Pharmacare's first year of operation and said the total expenditure compared favorably with the original spending estimate of $14.83 million.

Levi said Pharmacare was the first drug plan of its type in North America and involves three separate drug programs for residents of B.C.

The largest program, involving full payment for prescription drugs for all citizens 65 or over, covers nearly 230,000 people and last year cost $11.66 million.

Families receiving medical care assistance from the department of human resources also received full payment of all drug costs and last year 100,000 individuals received a total of $2.96 million in assistance.

The third program involves partial payment of prescription costs for families and individuals with no taxable income. In 1974, 211,000 people received prescription drug subsidies of $320,000.

In describing Pharmacare's first year of operations, Levi said the program was monitored closely by computer and abuses of the system were few.

Before the program began he said, the B.C. Medical Association feared abuses through patient pressure exerted on physicians to prescribe unnecessary medication but "there is no strong indication that medical practitioners have given in to such pressure even where it does occur."

The minister also announced an increase in fees to be paid B.C. pharmacists who participate in Pharmacare.

Pharmacists will be allowed to charge fees to a maximum of $2.55 per prescription compared to last year's rate of $2.20.

Levi said the "cost plus fee system" which replaced the traditional method in which pharmacists made a profit on the drug itself has resulted in many low-priced drugs increasing in cost and higher-priced prescriptions decreasing. The average prescription cost in B.C. last year was $4.68.

Prescriptions for analgesics and tranquilizers accounted for nearly 25 per cent of all medications dispensed under Pharmacare last year, but Pharmacare director Pat Tidball said the figure is in line with the national picture.

CONSERVATORY MEETING SET

The 10th annual general meeting of Victoria Conservatory of Music will take place Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle.

Following the business agenda duo pianists Robin Wood and Winifred Scott, recently returned from a concert tour, will present a program.

PAPER CHEQUES ON WAY OUT

OTTAWA (CP)—The government announced today it is setting up a committee to write the rules for a computer system to eliminate paper cheques.

The system might ultimately merge cheque-cashing and credit card systems, eliminating a need for many cash transactions.

A joint statement from Finance Minister John Turner and Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said the government will "take the lead to ensure the orderly development of the payments system."

The policy statement is the result of almost two years' work by a committee formed after a government study in 1973 raised several questions about the use of computers for paying bills.

The statement says the government favors a "common-user communications network" for the payments system. This would mean a type of communications system which banks, trust companies, credit unions and caisses populaires would use jointly.

Under the current cheque-clearing system, cheques are mailed to an individual's branch. A computer payments system would eliminate the transferring of paper.

The committee would set the standards for equipment used and for procedures.

A finance department spokesman said he did not believe the meetings would be open to the public but no decision on the issue had been made.

$2.5M Europe Drug Grab

BRUSSELS (AP) — Austrian and Belgian police joined forces on the weekend in the biggest European drug sweep in recent years, seizing nearly 90 pounds of heroin worth between $2.5 million and $3 million, officials said.

Police in Brussels and Vienna said they arrested 20 Malaysians travelling from Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital. All the suspects, and the heroin — described as some of the purest available — arrived aboard the same Belgian Sabena airliner, a regularly scheduled flight from Jakarta, Indonesia, to Brussels with stops in Kuala Lumpur, Tehran and Vienna.

Austrian customs officials, making a routine customs check at Schwechat airport, found about 40 pounds of the narcotic stashed away in suitcases, cognac bottles, cigarette packages, baby powder and dried plum containers — and inside a toy panda bear.

The find led to 10 Malaysians — seven men and three women — and a three-year-old boy travelling with them.

The similarity of the arrested Malaysians to others aboard the flight led Vienna police to suspect there might be more drugs on the plane and they informed Belgian police.

When the plane landed in Brussels, police arrested 10 other Malaysians and found the rest of the heroin, hidden in luggage, bags, bottles, cans and even melons.

The official in charge of the investigation at Vienna airport said the Malaysians — including fishermen, truck drivers and housewives — were probably only "transporters" for an international drug-smuggling ring.

Trio Appeal Dues

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three provincial employees exempted from union membership on religious grounds are challenging the government's rights to deduct union dues from their pay cheques.

The three, in a B.C. Supreme Court action started Friday by lawyer George Murray, seek a declaration that Section 8 of the Public Service Labor Relations Act — which provides for the deductions of dues — is invalid and beyond the power of legislature to enact.

The plaintiffs are A. John Price, a foreman with the B.C. Forest Service; Arnold N. Fraser, a draftsman with the water resources department; and B. Eileen McRae, a clerk typist with the forest service.

Defendants are the attorney-general, the labor minister, and the Labor Relations Board.

Under orders made by the LRB, the plaintiffs have to make written assignments of wages to the B.C. Government Employees Union.

Section 8 of the act provides that employees opposed to may be exempted by the LRB and provides for an assignment of wages to be made to the union in an amount equivalent to the union dues payable by members.

Day Two On Salyut

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts today spent their second working day aboard the Salyut 4 space laboratory reactivating its systems and checking scientific instruments, according to Tass.

The rookie cosmonauts, Lt. Col. Alexei Gubarev and civilian flight engineer Georgi Grechko, 43, boarded the orbiting Salyut Sunday from their Soyuz 17 spacecraft.

Tass said today they "carried out operations in reactivating the station and checking onboard systems and scientific instruments."

"According to crew reports and telemetered information, the cosmonauts feel well and all the onboard systems are functioning normally."

During the day, the research vessel Akademian Sergei Korolev was monitoring data and relaying information to Moscow by satellite from the Atlantic.

FIREMEN WATCH anxiously as this plane teeters on its nose while they endeavor to turn it right way up after heavy winds flipped it on its back during a thunderstorm in Chicago. Plane was one of 33 damaged at Midway Airport during the storm.

PARIS — Baron Jean-Louis de Portal, who claimed during a two-year siege in his ancestral home that "justice comes at the end of a gun," died Sunday of shotgun wounds received when paratroopers stormed the castle Saturday. The Portals had been ordered evicted for non-payment of debts. "It's a sad story of people who loved their land to the point of madness," commented one police official.

Yeti Tracks Seen Again

KATMANDU (UPD) — A leader of a Polish climbing team has told newsmen his expedition has seen and filmed footprints of the Yeti, reviving once again the legend of the abominable snowman.

Andrew Zawada, leader of a 16-member Polish group that tried and failed last November to scale 28,053-foot Mt. Lhotse, sister peak of Mt. Everest, told newsmen here Sunday he and other members of his party saw the footprints at the foot of Everest.

U.S. Car Firms: 1 in 3 Laid Off

Times News Services

DETROIT — One of every three blue collar workers in the auto industry was on a long- or short-term layoff today as the industry began the second full week of the new car production year.

General Motors, Ford and Chrysler entered the week with nearly 244,000 of their normal 689,000 assembly line workers off the job for periods ranging from one week to indefinite.

Figures released today in Washington show Michigan, with its heavy dependence on the auto industry, had an unemployment rate of 11.2 per cent in December, far above the national average of 7.1 per cent.

In California, nine per cent of the work force was idled in December.

In New Jersey, unemployment was 8.2 or 9.5 per cent in November, depending on whose statistics are used.

Officials in both those states are predicting rates of 10 per cent or better soon.

Hardest-hit major city in the U.S. is Detroit, where the auto makers have been laying off workers in near record numbers to bring the jobless rate to 12.4 per cent.

Director S. Martin Taylor of the Michigan Employment Security Commission said January unemployment would exceed even the record levels of December because of auto layoffs.

Ohio, the nation's second largest auto producing state, had an unemployment estimated at 6.7 per cent in December, up from 6.1 per cent in November, and the state's Bureau of Employment said it would increase in the months ahead.

New York's unemployment rate was 6.8 per cent in November but cutbacks in construction, textiles, printing and paper and electrical services growing. Buffalo, with an 8.8 per cent, was hit hard by auto, food processing and rubber company layoffs. New York City had a 7.4 per cent rate.

Texas and Illinois are two large states that thus far have escaped heavy job losses. Texas had a state-wide rate of 4.8 per cent in November and Illinois, 5.4 per cent.

BRITAIN HIT, TOO

LONDON (AP) — The Chrysler company in Britain went on a three-day work week today because of a slump in car sales. More than 10,000 workers will be affected by the production slowdown.

In a related development, the Vauxhall auto company announced unspecified production cuts today, company officials said.

A Clever, But Futile Scheme

Like Lewis Carroll's Cheshire cat, the grin behind Premier Barrett's natural gas taxation compromise will remain long after the issue has been resolved. Not that Barrett isn't serious, it's just that his three-way revenue-sharing scheme has the effect in British Columbia of putting the federal government on the defensive instead of the provincial government.

The proposal would see gas exports to the U.S. rising from $1 to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet by the end of 1975, resulting in a provincial revenue increase of $180 million. Barrett would cut this rich pie three ways, one-third each for the federal, provincial and B.C. municipal governments. As the premier points out it would give Ottawa more cash than it now receives under federal budget gas taxation proposals. And it was the federal budget which intensified the Victoria-Ottawa squabble. Resource producers, particularly in the field of natural gas, are to be taxed on "the fair market value," rather than the price received from provincial marketing corporations so that Ottawa continues to receive a "fair" share of resource income. B.C. maintains that the "fair market value" is the average 22 cents per thousand cubic feet which the B.C. Petroleum Corporation pays producers.

The budget measure was designed specifically to circumvent provincial marketing companies. Under the constitution the federal government cannot tax provincial corporations. By taxing producers on a so-far unspecified "fair market value," Ottawa, in effect, forces provincial governments to pay more to producers if they are to realize a profit after federal tax. Barrett has repeatedly said B.C. gas producers are receiving a fair profit at the 22-cent level, and any windfall profits should go to the people of B.C., not the producers. And it should be noted that provincial gas producers are not complaining under the current setup.

Against this background, Barrett's proposed alternative is devilishly shrewd. By offering Ottawa more money than it would get under current budget proposals he is asking the federal government, are you only interested in seeing higher profits accruing to gas producers or do you want to see these huge revenues used for the people of Canada? Offering B.C.'s financially hard-pressed municipalities $60 million on a platter not only earns added support for the premier's plan, it is tantamount to a provincial admission that municipalities need help — a fact that may come back to haunt the government if the plan fails.

It is also worth noting that Barrett is the only provincial premier to offer a new idea on the federal-provincial resource taxation issue. After much acrimony both Alberta and Saskatchewan bent to federal will with hardly a murmur. B.C.'s initiative puts the federal administration on the spot.

A blunt "no" from Ottawa would be analogous to being against motherhood; even a qualified "yes" would erode the federal government's carefully wrought taxation policies, and establish some dangerous precedents.

By accepting the proposal Ottawa would in effect be taxing a provincial crown corporation which is unconstitutional. It would also mean the federal government would be negating its claim to resource revenues and depending on the goodwill of the provinces to divvy up future profits equitably. To its chagrin the government has learned that when it comes to resource revenues provincial goodwill can't be taken for granted. And what banshee cries of indignation would emerge from the compromised provincial capitals of Edmonton and Regina if the Barrett plan was embraced? And what about American consumers faced with a 100-per-cent increase in gas prices? Ottawa is already on delicate ground with the U.S. over Canadian resource policies and may not want to turn the screw even tighter for fear of recrimination.

In essence: a clever but probably futile plan, in the tradition of W. A. C. Bennett's jousts with Ottawa. Barrett's drum beating on provincial radio network last Friday underscores the political cast of the scheme. If he thought his plan had a chance he would have taken it to Ottawa first and then announced it publicly. The premier may have more tricks up his sleeve for Ottawa. And while even home folks appreciate the current sleight of hand, the "magic" fools no one, least of all Ottawa.

Nostalgia-Crazy

Save the genteel old Crystal Gardens? Fine. Restore the legislative buildings to their Edwardian glory? Wonderful. Keep that awful 80-foot "art deco" tower atop the gas station on the causeway? No way.

Ald. Sam Bawlf carried out fine restoration work — and made money at it too — on the Counting House and Belmont building, but he's carried the search for things past beyond the bounds of good taste in his campaign to save that ugly pile of cement.

It may be an example of "the consummate design theme of the 1930s" to him, but we agree with Mayor Peter Pollen's more down-to-earth description of the thing as "California schlock." Bawlf's proposal should have been laughed out of council long before now.

He wants to make it the "pivotal point" of the whole area, a meeting point between waterfront and downtown. It's a pivotal point all right, and more — something of a fickle finger, a rude gesture at the sky. Seen from any angle, it just doesn't fit in with its surroundings.

No doubt city council will soon be asked to declare such eye-peeling architectural gems as the Johnson Street bridge and Ogden Point grain elevators as heritage structures and worthy of preservation.

U.K. Close to Wage Freeze?

LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has been sending out unmistakable signals to British trade unions that it is time for them to pay more than lip service to the social contract — the Labor party's unwritten pact with the unions to hold down wage demands for the good of the economy.

Senior trade union leaders say privately that it is more than a matter of publicly criticizing production-losing strikes. They believe that the prime minister is thinking the unthinkable, a statutory incomes policy.

Late in December, the director-general of the Engineering Employers Federation told a private lunch that he would bet five-to-one that there would be an incomes policy by Easter.

CBI Pressure

On the face of it, this is highly unlikely. Several government ministers have said a wage freeze forms no part of the economic policy of the Labor party. But the prime minister has said frequently since the October election that the British people should expect no increase in living standards for the next year or two.

He also has been under pressure from the Confederation of British Industry, the employers' group, to do something to curb the size of wage settlements or face massive unemployment and widespread business bankruptcies.

The sharp drop in December of Britain's official reserves of gold and foreign currencies was a shock to the government, as well as to London's financial circles.

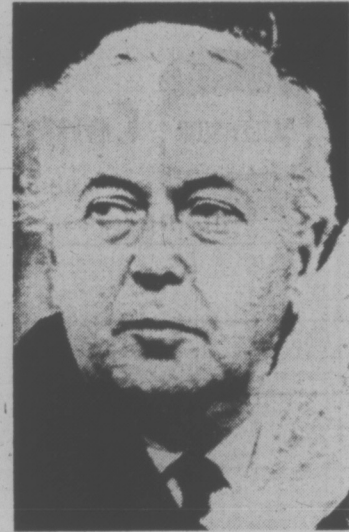

Similarly there was shock over the extent of the difficulties of Burmah Oil and British Leyland. This led to the prime minister's very tough speech in his constituency about "manifestly avoidable" strikes that were forcing state-backed factories to run at a loss.

His ire was aimed particularly at the automobile industry and specifically, the Austin-Morris division of British Leyland at Cowley, Oxfordshire. He warned that "public investment and participation cannot be justified on the basis of continued, avoidable loss-making."

This plant lost 350,000 man-days due to strikes in 1974 and Wilson said this lack of production had led to imported cars taking 35.64 per cent of British sales in November, representing an "unacceptable failure to compete by our home factories."

The British automobile industry has

two per cent of the total employees in the country and accounted for one-eighth of man-days lost in 1974 and almost one-third of man-days lost in 1973.

Undoubtedly, part of the reason for the many strikes is the sheer boredom of assembly line work as compared, for instance, to the Aston Martin factory, where the skilled men building the handmade cars rarely had an industrial dispute.

But a major cause of the endless disputes is that power in the auto factories lies at the shop steward level and some skilled industrial agitators have infiltrated the stewards' ranks to create trouble for their own ends. Senior union officers privately admit that they are frequently in thrall to shop stewards who insist on constant confrontation. The prime minister's speech did have the immediate effect of causing an apparent end to a strike of 150 engine turners at the Cowley plant that had threatened to cause 12,000 other workers to be laid off.

And the unions moved quickly to hold discussions with industry secretary Anthony Wedgwood-Benn as to how they could help in the government's rescue operation at British Leyland.

Try Harder

A key way in which they could help would be to restrain wage demands, which shop floor militants have recently been saying can be pushed vigorously now that government money is coming in. If union leaders were wondering if a change in the prime ministerial mind on incomes policy were likely they would only have to look at his recent moves regarding Common Market membership and his efforts to curb Benn's plan for massive state intervention in industry.

A wage freeze would be a perilous path for Wilson, given the failure of one he tried during the 1964-70 Labor government and the hostility of the Trades Union Congress to the counter-inflation policy of Tory prime minister Edward Heath.

He would want to have the tacit support of some key members on the general council of the TUC before going ahead. Several union leaders now seem to accept that unless they try harder to curb wage claims and reduce strikes during the worsening economic climate they will push the prime minister into a corner in which a wage freeze will become necessary.

'Big Enchilada' Off Scot-Free

NEW YORK — In the 30 months since the break-in at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee in the Watergate building, nine associates or subordinates of former president Richard M. Nixon have been convicted of various felonies committed in Nixon's service.

Fifteen others have pleaded guilty to felonies or misdemeanors in the Watergate matter, or in other cases related to Nixon. Thirteen of these Nixon men are or have been, in prison, and at least six others probably will go to jail unless their appeals are sustained. Two former Nixon administration officials await trial on felony indictments. In only three instances have persons linked to Nixon been acquitted of felony charges brought against them in the 30-month period.

This hasty count does not include businessmen who pleaded guilty or were convicted of various charges of illegal election campaign contributions to Nixon. It does not include the milk producers' officials who are serving time for arranging illegal contributions to Nixon. It does not consider Spiro Agnew, twice foisted on the American people by Nixon.

Unseen Presence

Nor does this unofficial count include Nixon associates whose reputations were ruined or diminished by association with him — L. Patrick Gray for instance, the former acting director of the FBI, or Maurice Stans, the former secretary of commerce.

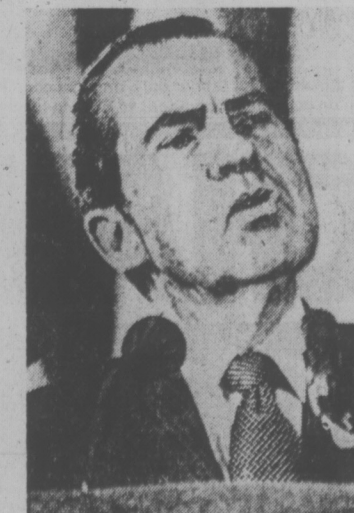

This listing does not include Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo, Nixon's closest friend, who is under investigation and may yet face charges of receiving illegal contribution on Nixon's behalf.

Finally, the accounting does not include Richard Milhous Nixon, unindicted co-conspirator, the big enchilada himself no matter how much he wished and plotted for someone else to assume the role.

Nixon was an unseen, but almost tangible presence in the courtroom when Judge John J. Sirica read out the guilty verdicts on John Mitchell, H. R. Haldean, John Ehrlichman and Robert Mariani.

As the evidence mounted over the months of the trial, and the defence seemed unable to shake it in any substantial way, it became apparent that guilty verdicts were likely. Whatever technicalities there may be by which the verdicts could be overturned, few will say that these verdicts were unreasonable or capricious. The acquittal of a fifth defendant, Kenneth W. Parkinson, seemed to underscore the jury's balanced judgment.

But if anybody belonged in that dock, with or without the other defendants, it was Richard Nixon. If anyone should have heard the word guilty applied to him, it was Richard Nixon. If anyone should have had to suffer the judgement of the people, it was Richard Nixon, in whose name and service, for whose purposes and protection, so many crimes had been committed by so many people who might never, in their own interest, have broken the law.

What is a Watergate-related case? It is a case not directly connected to the Watergate break-in or cover-up, but connected in some way to Richard Nixon.

And if all those cases — the milk contributions, the tax fraud, the Ellsberg break-in — have been lumped too conveniently into something abstract called Watergate-related cases, they are in reality, and ought to be known as, the Nixon scandals.

But the big enchilada escaped impeachment and removal from office by resigning two jumps ahead of constitutional retribution. He escaped legal accountability for any and all crimes he committed, caused to be committed, concealed or condoned, while president, because of Gerald Ford's unexplained but highly suspect pardon. He even escaped testifying at the trial because of ill health — an escape no less to be deplored because of its reason, and one that the defendants may yet be able to use to reverse the guilty verdicts.

Too Much

Nixon has admitted no guilt, no accountability, conceded nothing but poor judgment, and that grudgingly. If his acceptance of Ford's pardon was in some degree a confession, Nixon did not acknowledge it.

If the Watergate trial proved his guilt beyond any reasonable doubt, it did not state it explicitly, much less condemn or penalize it. If the loss of his office was a severe blow to him, that office had been his only temporarily. His resignation still entitles him to a $55,000 pension annually for having held and stained it as long as he did.

But the damage appears to be done. Ford clearly will not rescind the pardon, even if he could. Nixon will not disavow it, if he could. The only real chance to challenge it disappeared when special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski refused to do so — a decision foreshadowed by his persuasion of the grand jury not to indict Nixon. Nor is any state likely to prosecute the ex-president, although some might have legal grounds.

Pardoning some or all of those convicted will not balance the scales. Too many have served time, too much guilt has been forgiven. The hard truth is that justice has not and cannot be done in the Nixon scandals, because the big enchilada has escaped.

Paradox Noted

If thousands and thousands of absolutely innocent unborn infants of this great nation of Canada are destroyed (hygienically, of course) every year with a nod of the government's head, why does Mr. Trudeau shake his head at giving a convicted murderer a dose of the same medicine? — Roy Henshaw, 2624 Asquith Street.

Colonial Stereotypes

I refer to the Canadian Press story published in the Times (Dec. 30) regarding the recent racial incidents that took place in the Killarney area of Vancouver. As a permanent resident of this province, I do not find such incidents or the display of the prejudices and biases that work in their background as an unusual occurrence. What I do find unusual is a little more frequent reporting of these events in the main press of this province. This is a welcome development and hopefully it may lead to a greater role that the press and other news media should play in recognizing and thus helping to remedy social tensions in the province.

The above news story refers to what are called east Indians. Who are they? The derivative of the term India is Indian, not east Indian. Hence the phrases such as Indian Ocean, Indian sub-continent, Indian history, Indian music, etc.

Of course, in regional terms, those who originate from east India may be called east Indians. Similarly, for those who come from west India, the term west Indian may be used, especially now that the other misnomer for the people from the Caribbean region has disappeared along with the fictitious Federation of the West Indies. However, a vast majority of people that came here from India are the Sikhs from northern India. It seems, therefore, that these people should more appropriately be referred to as north Indians; that is if a prefix is at all needed.

The problem as we all know is that the term "Indian" was given to the native peoples of North America by the white settlers who later concocted the term east Indian to distinguish the two groups from each other.

Given the historical circumstances in which both groups began their new lives under the influence of white settlements, it is understandable that both started to refer to themselves as Indians and east Indians, respectively. But the continuous misuse of these two names is absolutely ridiculous. Perhaps it gives a feeling of superiority to the white settlers. It may also help each community to separate itself from the other, a game that the depressed groups often play with each other. Unfortunately, however, each of the two groups, by adopting the names given to them by their erstwhile white lords, have got themselves trapped in confused identities. An important ingredient required to fight racial prejudice is to develop self-respect and dignity with regard to one's own true identity in the general framework of the Canadian way of life. This means that Indians should become what they are, i.e., the native peoples of Canada, and the east Indians should return to their identity as Indians. Each of the two communities should discard their colonial stereotypes. I. D. Pal, University of Victoria.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of January 13, 1915

LONDON — The beer canteen at Salisbury Plain, where Canadian troops are encamped, has now been closed for just over a week and a chaplain belonging to the contingent, who is generally acknowledged as far from a bigot in matters of temperance, states that the improvement in general health of the contingent during the last 10 days has been simply marvelous. On the first day of the no-beer regime, he said half a dozen of the regular customers of the canteen presented themselves to be enrolled as abstainers, and ever since there has been a steady stream of men to do likewise.

FASTING: THE NEW POP ASCETISM

Pushing Back the Plate

Will fasting be the new year's fad? The United States is due for another flashy diversion, now that streaking has gone the way of all flesh.

In the past few weeks, the decibel level of fast talking has been rising. The Catholic bishops' Washington organization called for special parish programs in fasting as a means of easing the hunger crisis. The bishops are asking the faithful to limit food intake on at least two days a week. An organization called World Vision International is coming on with Project FAST — Fight Against Starvation Today; if a button is made, it supposedly will be worn on the opposite lapel of Gerald Ford's, so that the message reads WIN FAST, exactly how we like our victories.

Oxfam-America asked citizens to abstain from food for 24 hours on Nov. 21, calling the event "the Fast for a World Harvest." On Capitol Hill, a senator came out for fasting and an Anglican bishop in England announced a New Year's resolution of laying off tobacco and alcohol for three months to aid the world's hungry. Presumably the curse of hunger will have vanished by then, leaving His Leadership free to resume his puffing and bibbing.

Word hasn't come in yet on what the hungry and starving — those enduring an involuntary fast — think of all this pop asceticism. They probably have no thoughts at all, thinking being an activity best and most lucidly done on an unrumpled stomach. But the sudden fashion of fasting raises a number of questions that perhaps those of the culinary boycott have yet to reflect on as they push back the plate.

Panacea Psychology

Fasting is an ancient idea — going back to the fast at Misphe which Samuel convened for the citizens of Israel — but whether it can have meaning among contemporary Americans is questionable. The difficulty of these calls for fasting is that they are public appeals meant to change personal behavior.

Even more unlikely, the fasting is meant to have practical and political effects: if I eat less, the self-denying citizen says, the starving in India and the Sahel will get more food. We eat from a global menu and if one diner orders less meat and potatoes, that means more food on the tray for the 400 million people now starving.

The seductive simplicity of such a notion — the panacea psychology — when compared to the complexity of economics, politics and attitudes that are involved, is one reason to have doubts about the value of fasting. The origins of fasting had nothing to do with the politics of hunger.

When John the Baptist, a leather girdle around his lean loins, fasted on locusts and wild honey, he was making "ready the way of the Lord." In the Rule of St. Benedict, the 39th chapter "On the Measure of Food" — tells the brethren of Monte Casino that "there is nothing so opposed to the Christian character as over-indulgence." The thinking of these spiritual masters was that food for the body too easily distracted believers from hungering for food for the soul.

In fact, as late as 10 years ago, Roman Catholics were obliged to keep a fast — from midnight on — if they were receiving Holy Communion at Sunday Mass. In the saloons of the Irish, this meant that the hour between 11 p.m. and midnight was one of high fever, with great amounts of raucous energy devoted to leaving down the final belts of whisky and ale before the hour began.

Just as this mocked the spirit of fasting, so also did some of the practices of the early Christian ascetics who took to the deserts. Fasting competitions were common in the monasteries of the Near East — one holy fanatic showing the brethren that he was a truer servant of the Lord because he could fast longer on less. When these dietary acrobats took to the high-wire of boliness, they may have had empty abdomens but their pride was full. Ironically, if food wasn't in their stomachs, it was emphatically on their minds. It was hard to think of anything but food.

Modern Christians know the truth of this, recalling the Lenten of their childhoods when they "gave up" candy or ice cream for the 40 holy days. During Lent, they would have Easter Sunday hideouts, places around the house to stash the gum drops and Milky Ways for a gorging when Lent ended. Rather than leading one's mind down the paths of spirituality, the fasting created large potholes over which the genuine meaning of Lent could never jump.

Another technique was to fly over the potholes entirely. In "In Lighter Vein," John de Morgan writes: "In 'The Story of My Life,' August J. C. Hare tells a story of Cardinal Wiseman . . . The cardinal had been invited to dinner, but his host, forgetting that it was Friday and a fast day, had failed to provide a fast-day dinner. The cardinal was equal to the occasion, for he stretched out his hands in benediction over the table, and said, 'I pronounce all this to be fish,' and forthwith enjoyed all the good things heartily."

The argument is made by the new fasters that their form of controlled hunger is a way to raise consciousness. Sen. Mark Hatfield says, "As a person fasts, he or she can think how wasteful food consumption can be changed." It might also help if he has a picture of big-bellied, skeletal Bangladesh children before him, so he can stare into the face of graveyard misery and thus get extra vibes to go light on the desert.

But where have the new converts been all along, that they need a world crisis to wake them from their states of limited awareness? If this is the first hint they have had that something is dangerously wrong and immoral about the way many Americans eat and the American food system that feeds them, then it isn't likely that fasting will do much more than produce a momentary feel-good sensation of "involvement."

All Injustices

It is not coincidence that those Americans who have engaged in fasting — Dorothy Day, Cesar Chavez, Dick Gregory, the late Peter Maurin — have also lived in such a way that protesting war, corporate abuse, competitiveness, government dishonesty, Pentagon profligacy and all forms of injustice was basic to their existence. For them, fasting involved a well-considered philosophy of food consumption but it was not developed overnight, nor was it made an effective part of their lives without an accompanying social and political philosophy that also worked to overcome the causes of injustice that create hunger.

By COLMAN MCCARTHY
The Washington Post

Peter Maurin, who with Dorothy Day began the Catholic Worker movement, wrote what he called an "easy essay" titled "Feeding the Poor":

In the first centuries of Christianity

The hungry were fed at a personal sacrifice, the naked were clothed at a personal sacrifice, the homeless were sheltered at a personal sacrifice, and because the poor were fed, clothed and sheltered at a personal sacrifice, the pagans used to say about the Christians

'See how they love each other.' In our own day the poor are no longer

fed, clothed and sheltered at a personal sacrifice

But at the expense of the taxpayers.

And because the poor are no longer

fed, clothed and sheltered at a personal sacrifice

the pagans say about the Christians

'See how they pass the buck.'

To be conscious of the hungry and begin a personal program of fasting is surely positive, but fasting isn't really necessary if one has had a sensible philosophy of food all along. Anyone who has had the slightest awareness that the world contained a few more stomachs than his own would already have found ways to involve himself to help eliminate hunger. No sudden heroics are needed — quick, get the hairshirts — because there has been a personal commitment all along.

Take Many Forms

This commitment can take many forms. It might mean being aware of, and when possible avoiding, the foods processed by some of the giant agribiz companies whose policies Cesar Chavez had in mind recently when he told an audience: "I would like to leave you with one thought. Every time you sit at a table at night or in the morning to enjoy the fruits and grains and vegetables from our good earth, remember that they come from the work of men, women and children who have been exploited for generations . . . at your table you are partaking of the exploitation they have suffered. How can these workers participate in such a great wealth of food and end up with not enough for themselves? We have to change this."

The commitment might mean avoiding meat because of the excessive grain needed to feed the animals. Word has gotten out on the exact proportions of American meat — last, Frances Moore Lauppe notes in "Diet for a Small Planet" that about 18 million tons of protein is lost annually in America's eating of meat and poultry — enough to correct 90 per cent of the world's protein deficiency. But even this is only a crumb on Lazarus.

Any number of metaphors can describe the presence of the rich and the poor on the same planet, but in explaining the difference between the fed and the unfed the metaphor of the river is apt. Originally, the River Earth was wide and calm, and the gifts of nature flowed down its water in abundance, intended for all the people living along the banks. Enough existed for everyone: in protein, minerals and vitamins.

No trouble occurred until one day upstream one tribe decided to dam part of the river and keep an overage for itself. The tribe was only 5 per cent of all those living along the river but in time it blocked 40 per cent of the flow. Many of the downriver people soon had less than they needed, and some none at all. Death and starvation resulted.

Such an image depicts America. We live upstream. Instead of taking from the planet what we need, we have taken what we want. The wanting has been enormous. Economist Barbara Ward has figured that the United States, Canada, Britain and France spend about $50 billion annually on tobacco and alcohol; "10 per cent of each dollar spent (on those items) would equal five-sixths of the entire aid program of the Atlantic nations today."

Developing a personal food philosophy has to include a disgust and resistance against the current madness for diets. The same nation that walks away from the global table stuffed to the bookstore for the new diet book. The gibberish of them all — whether the high protein, low carbohydrate, ketogenic, drinking man's, eat-what-you-want, the Drs. Atkins; Stillman or Solomon diets is reducible to five words: exercise and eat balanced meals.

The spectacle of the bookstore is not only the diet books but also the cookbooks. Over the years, several of the latter — "Better Homes and Gardens New Cook Book," "Betty Crocker's Cook Book," "The Joy of Cooking" — have had a combined hardcover sales of 37 million. Thus, at the same time we buy books on new ways to add weight, we buy other books telling us how to lose it.

Even more of an indictment, much of the food that we overeat is so nutritionally worthless that rather than sustaining life it is harming it. Dental disease — the nation's most widespread illness, affecting 9 per cent of the population — has one major cause: inferior food that rots the teeth and gums. The nation's annual dental bill is about $5 billion, with about 56 million teeth

Yanked. Yet, amid these oral sensations, soft drink sales total $6 billion. It is not a surprise that the U.S. government at the Rome food conference made no serious commitment of its food reserves to the world's hungry. It correctly perceived that a nation that lacks the spirit to care about its own teeth can hardly arouse itself to care about the unseen, silent citizens dying in distant countries like India or Chad.

The value, if any, of the current fasting wave is more in its symbolism than in its effectiveness. The table may be global, but sitting between those Americans of conscience who are fasting and the hungry of the Third World are people like Earl Butz, chairmen of the grain companies, even the politicians who run things in the poor nations; many of these are ready to freeze into inaction when someone says, "Pass the food down to the other end."

Should anyone feel overwhelmed by the lack of immediate results his fasting brings about to ease world hunger, there is something else he can do; fast and give the saved money to ease neighborhood hunger. This, strangely, is often far beyond the vision of those who

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald sowed something, if not the wind, when he yielded to the "antis" in the New Democratic Party in British Columbia and ordered the banning of South African wines and spirits from Liquor Board store shelves.

Now it is the turn of East European ethnic organizations who are calling upon him to follow suit and ban Soviet-manufactured vodka.

Well, why not? If South African potables are held guilty by association because of Premier Vorster's apartheid policy, should not Russian vodka be benched on the ground — as these ethnic groups allege — of Soviet oppression of minorities, and not only Jewish minorities?

There is a certain sarcasm

The menu is global yanked. Yet, amid these oral sensations, soft drink sales total $6 billion.

It is not a surprise that the U.S. government at the Rome food conference made no serious commitment of its food reserves to the world's hungry. It correctly perceived that a nation that lacks the spirit to care about its own teeth can hardly arouse itself to care about the unseen, silent citizens dying in distant countries like India or Chad.

Should anyone feel overwhelmed by the lack of immediate results his fasting brings about to ease world hunger, there is something else he can do; fast and give the saved money to ease neighborhood hunger. This, strangely, is often far beyond the vision of those who are the most loudly "distressed" about world hunger. They ignore the poor and hungry within a few minutes of them. Only the hungry far away have a claim on one's excess food.

That makes fasting clean, unmessy and soothing. It also confirms what the French moral philosopher Yves Congar noted:

"Never in this history of the West has it been seen that a nation or class, in whatever social system, agreed to lower its living standards for the sake of relieving contemporary misery."

If history remembers America in a kindly light, it will not be because its politicians wanted it as a number one — we were first in the number of bombs, cars and can openers — but because we were the first nation in history to decide collectively to feed the hungry at a personal sacrifice. If we aren't remembered for that, all other glories will be forgotten. It is the shame of political Washington that no one in power — not in Gerald Ford's White House or in the Department of Agriculture — thinks enough of the American people to create the structure for individuals to make sacrifices that make a difference.

AFTER SOUTH AFRICA, WHO'S NEXT?

An Editorial

detectable in the ethnic groups' note to Mr. Macdonald, one may feel. The banning of Soviet vodka, they suggest, might silence those critics who regarded the South African bans as hypocritical.

It might silence the critics, but it could also open the Pandora's box a little wider. After all, there is Chilean wine on the shelves yet, and though nobody objected when Chile was being run by a pro-Marxist, Allende, there have been murmurs against the allegedly fascist rule of the Chilean military.

But of course Mr. Macdonald has scarcely scratched the surface. If we only look around we can find dictatorialships all over Africa and South America that need a lesson from us good people. If they don't produce wine or brandy, surely they have some other export we can ban.

Watergate: Who Else Is Guilty?

New York Times

"Four out of five guilty!" shouted the man on the desk in the newsroom, as the bottom fell out of the lives of John Mitchell, Bob Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Robert Mardian.

The appeals courts will determine whether justice triumphed in the Watergate coverup trial, or whether truth triumphed at the expense of justice. But the decision of the nine women and three men puts the seal of finality on the seamiest episode of recent U.S. history.

When Mr. Average Man pronounced the verdict of guilty on four formerly powerful men, the reaction of other average Americans was that they must have deserved it, and thank God it's all over.

But it's not over. Up to now, inquiry into the unlawful use of the law has centered on Watergate and its aftermath, but the investigation of the abuse of power has only just begun. Guilt is guilt, and it is not lessened by an examination of "root causes"; however, the verdict — significantly, on the first day of the final quarter century of this millennium — marks the end of Watergate and the beginning of a broader self-examination.

The forthcoming exposure of the Central Intelligence Agency also has to do with the unlawful use of the law.

When the New York Times recently blew the lid off CIA domestic activity, a headline writer automatically narrowed the wrongdoing to "the Nixon years." But we are coming to see that these illegal practices began well before that.

During the Watergate investigation, Charles Colson put forward a theory

COLSON
could blow whistle

that the CIA had more to do with Watergate than met the FBI. This was ignored. Even when Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee issued a report detailing the curious coincidences of CIA involvement, the idea was resisted as somehow taking the blame away from the then president Nixon.

Now, a year after his testimony was taken in secret by the Senate Watergate committee, it is seen that Howard Hunt was in a CIA unit that spied on Barry Goldwater's 1964 campaign.

Why was this testimony suppressed — "covered up" — for a year? What other useful information about the unlawful use of the law has been put on ice to protect Americans from distraction until the Nixon men were jailed?

Perhaps now a congressional committee will look into the surveillance of newsmen by Lyndon Johnson's Marvin Watson, hinted at and hushed up at the House Judiciary Inquiry.

Perhaps the American Civil Liberties Union will volunteer to represent Mrs. Martin Luther King in a lawsuit against the FBI for illegal wiretapping of her late husband.

For the office of the special prosecutor, these are the days of wine and roses, with the acquittal of Kenneth Parkinson the one exception in an otherwise perfect record. Even Harry Dent was forced to plead guilty to a misdemeanor, and the indictment of some Hubert Humphrey aides has helped present a nicely non-partisan image.

But soon some hard questions will be asked, and not by diehards or partisans. How can the sweetheart relationship that appears to exist between the special prosecution force and the FBI be explained?

Patrick Gray, a fine and patriotic man, has reportedly admitted destroying evidence during the cover-up. Why has the former FBI chief not been prosecuted? Because Pat Gray could blow the whistle on a dozen top agents of the FBI, requiring trials on a variety of crimes and generally lowering morale. That would be attacking present power, not past power, and that is not done.

Another example: William Sullivan, a former high FBI official, has not been placed under oath and asked the kind of question that might embarrass FBI men currently in office, or might conflict with sworn testimony of the U.S. supreme commander in Europe. Sullivan has been unwell, but the reason he has not been called is that the special prosecutor does not want to get into those sticky areas of "bag jobs" and political spying.

On those same lines, Cartha DeLoach, a close aide to J. Edgar Hoover, has not been asked under oath about the wiretapping of Anna Chennault in 1968, and of the subsequent illegal FBI intrusion in the U.S. political process in that year's election campaign. The law enforcement establishment, of which the special prosecution force is a part, does not want to foul its own nest.

Perhaps Americans' interest in the unlawful use of the law will wane with the satisfying clank of prison gates behind the four men most recently pronounced guilty. I hope not. Revelation of embryonic activity in the 1960s does not extenuate crimes of more recent vintage, but they will show how pervasive and dangerous unconcern has been.

No vendetta is needed, no "getting even" by smearing dead men's reputations, no prison sentences for lawmen who operated in the approved context of their times. But needed after this verdict of guilty is a searching look at who else was guilty, what set the pattern for the excesses being paid for today, so that an understanding can be gained of why some upright men go wrong.

COUP DISRUPTS MOCK HOUSE

A group of insurgents briefly interrupted Model Parliament at the Legislative Buildings Saturday by staging a model coup, and hanging their actions on the issue of Standfield underwear.

The insurgents' statement said they were attempting to "ensure that foreign interests do not hinder the free and open trade of Standfield underwear, an issue pleading to be covered up."

Although the mock coup didn't last long, Prime Minister David McPhee, a Liberal, said the insurgents' action was a "mockery of the House."

The 11 revolutionaries carried cap guns when they burst into the legislative chamber, only to be stopped by the sword of the sergeant-at-arms Colin Hart, a University of Victoria student, and member of the fencing club.

On a motion parliamentary members started filing out of the house while the rebels were reading their manifesto. It called for hockey puck production, "one of Canada's greatest industries," sponsorship of daily roller derbies and equal rights for french poodles and English terriers.

Facing an empty house, the revolutionaries soon decided to take a more passive position and filed into the visitors' gallery. Proceedings resumed shortly after.

Model parliament, sponsored by the province's three universities, ended Sunday after what Prime Minister McPhee called "successful deliberations."

The Liberal government, he said, survived a motion of non-confidence and passed a number of pieces of legislation including: equalization of freight rates across the country, amendments to the Canadian Labor Code which would allow all officials in unions to be elected only by Canadian members; and an energy bill which set up a commission to study best possible procedures for tapping the nation's energy resources.

Price Tag $74,500 On Heritage House

A price tag of $74,500 has been put on the Humber House, expected to be designated one of the city's first heritage houses.

The red-brick building at 610 Gorge is currently for sale by owners Brad and Leslie Kent. It dates back to the early 1880s, was one of a pair of similar homes built by contractor and brickyard owner Luke Humber.

Both city architect Ainslie Helmen and Hallmark Society spokesman Carolyn Smyly agree the house should be preserved for its architectural, rather than historical significance. It was designed by John Teague, a former city mayor.

Historical buildings designated heritage houses by the city's heritage advisory committee cannot be demolished or altered drastically without city council's consent.

Houses have not yet been reviewed by the committee, currently completing a study of downtown commercial buildings.

Real estate agent for the Humber House suggests the house has a great future as a neighborhood pub, restaurant or beauty parlor.

New Spill In Ireland

DUBLIN (UPI) — Thick black sludge from the second oil spillage in 11 weeks threatened beauty spots and beaches along Ireland's southwest coastline today. Officials of the Gulf Oil Company said the cleanup operation could take six weeks.

The Liberian-registered tanker Afran Zodiac spilled 113,000 gallons of her own fuel oil into the waters of Bantry Bay Friday after being holed in a collision with a tug during a gale.

The new spillage came as teams of volunteer workers were cleaning up the traces of the spillage of 630,000 gallons of oil into Bantry Bay from the tanker Universal Leader on Oct. 22.

Skilled Strings Lead Sensitive Mozart Concert

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A scintillating and at the same time sensitive and richly musical performance of a Mozart masterpiece by two distinguished string players is a highlight of the first Victoria Symphony concerts in 1975.

The program was premiered Sunday at the Royal Theatre.

Skilfully accompanied by the symphony strings and woodwinds under Laszlo Gati's baton, the orchestra's concert master, Harry Ca-wood and guest violinist Gerald Stanick performed the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat.

This wonderful glowing music suits soloists and ensemble to perfection. Stanick who produces a full, sleek tone from his Maggini (1600) viola, and exhibits a wondrously smooth and supple bowing technique, is worthily matched by Cawood's fluency and entrancing musicianship.

The two solo parts are closely woven and mutually complimentary and the soloists acknowledged this with a total agreement of thought and musical intent.

Gati contrasts the exquisite formality and late baroque elegance of the Mozart by dividing the rest of the program between two closely linked Hungarian composers — Bela Bartok and Zoltan Kodaly.

Few conductors could be better qualified to interpret this folk-inspired tonally exotic music than Gati, a Hungarian himself and at one time a student of Kodaly.

The Kodaly Divertimento for Strings, a three-movement composition, explores every aspect of string tone and texture and reveals impressively the advances made this season in the orchestra's string choir.

The virtuosity of the finale was trouble-free on Sunday and tonally and texturally satisfying, while the brooding, haunted slow movement caught at the imagination with lingering effect.

Kodaly's Hary Janos Suite brings a full orchestra to the stage amplified by additional brass and percussion, piano (Robin Wood) and celeste (Winifred Scott).

This pulse-stirring music that in its six movements is eternally charming, rousing, emotionally affecting and martial, explores symphonic sound richly and imaginatively.

There are delightful, solo passages that emerge like shining single threads in a thickly textured tapestry — a fine clarinet, a sonorous horn, an eloquent viola in a simple folk melody (principal violinist James Crieft) a full-toned saxophone (Kenneth Zmuda).

The Kodaly and Mozart numbers were recorded for broadcast by CBC.

The program will be repeated tonight at 8:30 at the Royal Theatre.

Prince Charles Was IRA Target

DUBLIN (UPI) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army failed in two attempts last year to kidnap Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, IRA sources said today.

The IRA also planned to assassinate Home Secretary Roy Jenkins, an IRA spokesman said Sunday.

The plans were conceived by IRA political strategist David O'Connell as a "decisive stroke" to make the British government give in to IRA demands. But they were abandoned after the second failure and O'Connell began pressing for a political solution, the sources said.

"It was planned to snatch Prince Charles and take him to Ireland," the spokesman said. "The ransom would have been the end of internment, withdrawal of British troops (from Northern Ireland) and unification of Ireland."

The spokesman said a hand-picked IRA squad shadowed the Prince in Scotland last summer but abandoned the kidnap attempt after Charles' car was involved in an accident and he was quickly guarded by a backup car with bodyguards.

SURGENOR QUALIFIES

Special to the Times
RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Ross Surgenor will be in the middle of the pack for Saturday's running of the Permatex 200 late-model stock car race here.

Surgenor, driving his 1968 Ford Torino, qualified 15th Sunday while Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore., winner of last September's Canada 200 at Victoria's Western Speedway, qualified eighth in his 1968 Chevelle.

The pole position went to Jimmy Insolo of Mission Hills, Calif., while a pair of NASCAR regulars, George Fullmer and Bobby Allison, qualified second and third respectively.

McGriff also has entered next Sunday's Winston Western 500, in which he will drive a new 1974 Chevelle owned by Dick Midgley of Victoria. Qualifying runs for that one is Friday and Saturday and Midgley leaves Thursday for Riverside.

Surgenor blew an engine in the Permatex qualifying run last year but finished 15th in the race two years ago despite mechanical trouble.

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said during the weekend the Summer Olympic Games will take place here on schedule in July, 1976.

"The Quebec government saved the Olympics at a critical stage two years ago when it obtained a guarantee from the federal government," Bourassa said. "We are ready to save them a second time, provided interested parties offer a minimum of co-operation."

The premier was referring to a dispute involving 1,200 iron workers who walked out illegally late last year demanding a $1 an hour cost-of-living bonus. Inflation, he said, was at the root of the problem.

The ironworkers' strike has forced shutdown of 30 major construction projects, including construction of the $380-million Olympic stadium.

Contractors say the iron workers, who install reinforcing rods and webbing to support buildings, do not deserve the increase in wages because their productivity has diminished.

Both parties in the dispute are to appear before a committee of the Quebec national assembly Tuesday, under the provisions of a bill empowering the labor minister to intervene in construction strikes.

Cournoyer said he would make "an offer the parties in dispute shouldn't refuse." He is expected to offer the ironworkers a formula, to adjust their wages as inflation increases, rather than the flat $1 hourly the workers are asking.

Union spokesmen have said they would not accept less than the $1.

The labor minister could impose a settlement by decree if the parties do not agree.

Cowichan Lakers continued their winning ways Saturday when they hammered James Bay Athletic Association Gulls 9-2 in South Island Big Six Hockey League play at Lake Cowichan Arena.

The victory was the 24th in 27 outings for the Lakers, who have lost just once this season.

Doug Hanna paced the Lakers with three goals with Neil Sanders adding two and Ray Bunsely, Rod Hunter, Gus Ryan and Ed Croteau one each. Darrell Elliott and Perry Head tallied for James Bay.

Belmont Captures Tournament

VANCOUVER — Belmont Braves won the annual Hilltopper high school boys' basketball tournament Saturday.

The Braves defeated host Delbrook Hilltoppers 69-62 in the championship final.

Trailing by two points at half time, Belmont rallied behind the play of Bruce English and Rick Reece to outscore Delbrook 41-32 in the second half.

English was the game's top scorer with 20 points while Reece added 17.

Billie Jean Trowned By Evert

Times News Services

Chris Evert convincingly upheld her claim to the No. 1 ranking in women's tennis Saturday night, beating Billie Jean King 6-1, 6-1 in the finals of the $75,000 tournament opening the 1975 women's indoor tour in San Francisco.

"I'm getting too old for this," the 31-year-old Mrs. King, pushed out of the top spot in the world-wide rankings by Miss Evert, declared after the 50-minute match.

In Davis Cup Play, Chile completed a 4-1 win over Brazil in the South American zone final of Davis Cup tennis by splitting a pair of singles matches Sunday in Santiago. Brazil's Tomas Koch beat Jaime Pinto in the last singles match to prevent a Chilean sweep. Chile's Jaime Fillol had beaten Luis Pelaez Tavarez 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 in the day's other match.

Australia clinched its Davis Cup Eastern Zone semi-final Sunday when John Newcombe defeated Japan's Toshiro Sakai in straight sets 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 in Adelaide.

The match gave Australia an insurmountable 3-1 lead in the best-of-five series.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S YEAR.

IT'S NOT A SLOGAN, IT'S AN ATTITUDE.

Sure, we have a button for you to wear during International Women's Year. But there's something else you should wear. Not just this year, but all the time.

It's an attitude. An attitude that says no one will ever again deny you an opportunity just because you're a woman. That no one will ever pay you less money than a man when you perform the same job as a man. That next time a prejudice or a precedent says "No, you can't," you're going to ask "Why not?"

It's a question that raises a very serious point.

And the point is that, despite numerous laws which outlaw discrimination against women, many opportunities are still denied us, many avenues are still closed to us and far too many prejudices still cloud the minds of men and women alike.

There aren't many women-lawyers in Canada. There aren't many women doctors. There aren't many women stockbrokers or airline pilots or bus drivers or mechanics. There still aren't enough women Members of Parliament.

And what we should be asking ourselves is "Why not?" because, unfortunately, change will not come until we demand it.

We must tell ourselves that nothing is beyond us. That, if we have the ability, we must have the confidence to be anything we want to be. That, if we have the conviction, we must have the right to try.

Every housewife should be accepted as the equal of her husband, but too often she's not. An intelligent, capable bank teller should be given the same opportunity to become president as her equally capable male colleague, but she's not. Why not!

Is it all a hangover from the past? If it is, let's put the past behind us. Let's keep on reminding ourselves that this is 1975, not 1875. Let us tell ourselves, and those around us, that we will no longer settle for a secondary role in society.

Let us look upon the progress we've made in the past with pride. And the challenges we face in the future with determination.

If you'd like more information on International Women's Year and the status of women in Canada, all you have to do is write us or fill in and mail the coupon below.

If you'd like a "WHY NOT?" button, and a set of posters, just check the appropriate squares.

Canadian Makes It a 'Shoe-In'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Imagine the Super Bowl game being decided by a pair of shoes from Montreal?

You'd be surprised how many of the champion Pittsburgh Steelers feel that it was.

Unsung hero in this behind-the-scenes success story is Tony Parisi, the Steelers' equipment man for the past 10 years.

It occurred to him that it might rain before Sunday's game, which it did, and that Tulane Stadium's artificial turf surface might be slick and slippery, which it was.

So Parisi, 41, a transplanted Canadian acting strictly on his own, ordered 75 pairs of shoes with special rubber cleats from Montreal.

"God knows where he found those shoes, but a lot of us wore them and it was as if they came from heaven," said linebacker Andy Russell, captain of the Steelers' defensive unit.

"They made a tremendous difference out there. They were absolutely fantastic. I understand they're not even on the market yet, but I heard Tony went up to Canada some place to get them and a lot of us wore them out there."

Russell was only one of many Steelers players who wore the shoes after they slipped and slid through the first half.

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw also tried them and praised them, as did Franco Harris.

"I called up the weather bureau earlier in the week, asked for the long range forecast and was told there was a good chance there would be a lot of rain by the end of the week," Parisi explained. "I remembered us playing in Miami four years ago and the polyturf got so slick after it rained that we had trouble. The Dolphins didn't, so I talked to their equipment man and he told me about this multi-cleated composition that he had outfitted his players with."

"That was a number of years ago, but I remembered there was something new I had heard about that still hadn't come out on the market. I did a little checking around and I found out I could get the special type shoes up in Montreal."

Buffalo Line Disconnected?

By The Canadian Press

No scanner was Buffalo's French Connection line reunited Sunday night when another injury threatened to break up the explosive trio.

Rick Martin, playing in his first National Hockey League game after missing seven games with a thumb injury, opened the scoring at Buffalo to start the Sabres to a 5-1 victory over Vancouver Canucks.

But centre Gil Perreault, who helped set up Martin's goal and two others by left winger Rene Robert, suffered a knee injury when he ran into a hip check by Vancouver defenceman Mike Robitaille in the third period.

Perreault was taken to hospital and there was no immediate word on the seriousness of the injury to his left knee—the same knee on which he had surgery last year.

In other NHL games Sunday, Toronto Maple Leafs edged New York Islanders 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks beat New York Rangers 4-2, Philadelphia Flyers defeated California Seals 2-1, Montreal Canadiens whipped Washington Capitals 7-2 and St. Louis Blues beat Detroit Red Wings 2-1.

Saturday, Montreal blanked Philadelphia 6-0, Boston

Bruins beat Chicago 5-1, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated California 6-3, Los Angeles Kings beat Toronto 7-5, the Rangers defeated St. Louis 5-3, Kansas City Scouts defeated Washington 5-3, Atlanta Flames and the Islanders tied 2-2, Buffalo and Detroit tied 3-3 and Vancouver's game at Minnesota was postponed because of snowstorms.

NEWCOMER SPARKS TOROS

By The Canadian Press

When Toronto Toros announced a coaching change last Friday, one man involved in the shuffle was overlooked but he didn't take long to make himself conspicuous Sunday night.

Jeff Jacques was a left winger toiling with Mohawk Valley Comets in the North American Hockey League until the Toros called him up Friday to replace Bobby Leduc, named to take over the coaching task from Billy Harris who quit at least temporarily due to family illness.

Jacques joined the Toros just an hour before their World Hockey Association game Sunday at Houston but came up with four goals in a 7-4 Toronto victory over the defending league champion Aeros.

The remainder of Sunday's WHA schedule was cut by storms in Western Canada and the United States. The Vancouver at Minnesota and Indianapolis at Winnipeg games were both postponed because of the snowstorms and Quebec Nordiques were an hour late arriving at Edmonton where they rallied for a 3-1 victory over the Oilers.

The only other game played saw Cleveland Crusaders beat Phoenix Roadrunners 4-2. (Summaries on Page 13).

No, all the tickets aren't sold but there is good news for the organizers of the Western Canada Hockey League's 10th annual all-star game.

All the players selected for Tuesday's parade of talent at Memorial Arena are expected to participate, thanks, in part, to the schedule.

Most of the players were to arrive this morning in time for team workouts.

Arrivals should include players from Manitoba's three teams in the 12-team WCHL — Flin Flon Bombers, Brandon Wheat Kings and Winnipeg Clubs.

Appearance prospects might have been more doubtful if the three teams had been at home Sunday. Winter storm hit Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan, bringing travel to a halt, as evidenced by the postponement of a World Hockey Association game in Winnipeg.

Weather over the Prairies was such that the entire Sunday slate of four Manitoba Junior Hockey League games was wiped out and the Saskatchewan junior circuit was forced to postpone three games.

However, Manitoba's WCHL teams avoided the blizzards. Flin Flon and Winnipeg were both in Alberta and Brandon happened to be in warmer B.C. Those three clubs contribute eight players to the Eastern Division's all-stars.

Also scouting away from storms at the weekend were governors of the 12 teams. They rolled into Victoria on Sunday and promptly huddled for the first of three meetings.

FAN WELCOMES ARREST

Ejection of Brandon defenceman Gary Soetaert.

Soetaert was ejected with a game misconduct after drawing his third major penalty. He became involved with a fan and reportedly swung his stick at the spectator. The stick broke. The fan apparently picked up a portion of the broken stick and threw it at the Brandon player.

But league president Ed Chynoweth said "nothing to report" after Sunday's meeting in the Hotel Empress. Other meetings were scheduled today and again Tuesday. These, Chynoweth said, may be more significant.

The league will discuss playoff dates and probably revise the subject of expansion. Another significant topic to be discussed will be raising of the junior age limit from 19 to 20.

Victoria Cougars' Pat Ginnell, instrumental in getting the all-star game here, was feeling cheerier than he was earlier in the week when he expressed disappointment in the pre-game ticket sales.

"They're starting to move," he said. "Many fans obviously believed we were close to a sellout and weren't interested

In winding up with poor seats. Sales picked up as soon as they found there are plenty of good seats left."

Tickets also are available, through the Cougar office in the Imperial Inn or at the Empress Hotel, for tonight's all-star banquet.

Among the guest speakers at the banquet in the Empress will be Babe Pratt, Vancouver Canucks' executive director in charge of story-telling, and Hall-of-Famer Red Storey.

Ginnell said he was also hoping to get Les Costello, one of Ontario's hockey-playing "Flying Priests." Father Costello, who played briefly with Toronto Maple Leafs before going into priesthood, happens to be visiting in Vancouver.

Canadian Basketball Star Dies in Florida

Times News Service — Mike Moser, a member of the Canadian national basketball team during the last three years, died Sunday in St. Petersburg, Fla., after he had entered hospital for treatment of what was believed to be influenza.

A spokesman for the University of Waterloo, where Moser was a student, said the university team was in Florida for an exhibition tour when Moser became ill last Thursday and was taken to hospital Friday morning.

An autopsy was to be performed to determine cause of death.

Loni Klettler of Jasper, Alta., placed first in two women's giant slalom ski races during Alberta Cup competition in Banff over the weekend. Larry Arbuthnot of Montreal won the Canadian one-man luge championship Saturday in Lake Placid, N.Y., defeating nine other bobsled contestants. Earl

The West Indies took a marginal two-run first inning lead over India Sunday at Madras, India, then dismissed four opening Indian batsmen for only 85 runs in the second inning of the fourth test. An amazing 24 wickets fell the first two days of action. Steve Mike-Mayer of Maryland kicked a 22-yard field goal with 25 seconds remaining Saturday to give the South All-Stars a 17-17 tie with the North in the Senior Bowl football game at Mobile, Ala. Selari Spirit owned by Sam Son Farm of Oakville, Ont., defeated 4-5 shot Christopher R by 1½ lengths Saturday to win the $28,050 Bowie Handicap.

Police, continuing their investigation after the game, said one officer suffered a welt when hit on the forehead and another suffered a cut hand.

An investigating officer told New Westminster club officials that the fan welcomed police intervention.

It's the first time I've ever been thanked for arresting anyone," the policeman said. He added police were considering charges against "that coach (Johnson) and player No. 19 (Soetaert)."

Bruins, by the way, won the game 8-2. There was no report on who won the fights, of which there were 12 that resulted in 23 majors.

In other action Sunday, Winnipeg Clubs struck for six goals in the final period to defeat the Centennials 7-5 in Calgary, and a goal by Ralph Klassen late in the third period provided Saskatoon Blades with a 3-2 victory over Regina Pats.

On Saturday, Edmonton beat Regina 5-1, Kamloops clipped Brandon 6-3 and Medicine Hat Tigers routed Flin Flon Bombers 13-1 as Don Murdoch, the league's leading goal-getter, got three more to run his season's total to 47. (Summaries on Page 13.)

Mean Joe's Gang Was Never Better

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mean Joe Greene, leader of Pittsburgh Steelers' ferocious front four, finally made an old man's dream come true.

Not that Franco Harris didn't have something to do with it. After all, a Super Bowl rushing record is not to be overlooked.

But in the long run, it was Pittsburgh's front four that ultimately gave the Steelers and their 73-year-old owner, Art Rooney, their first National Football League championship after 42 years of frustration.

The Steelers dropped the Vikings 16-6 as Greene, Dwight White, Ernie Holmes and L.C. Greenwood held Minnesota to just 21 yards rushing, making the Vikings the first club to lose three Super Bowl games.

If there was any deceptiveness, it was only in the final score. The six points the Vikings got weren't really of their own making. They were the result of a blocked punt. So, in effect, the Steelers' defense came up with a shutout.

"They've never played a better defensive game, never," coach Chuck Noll said. "Our defense has been fantastic all season and I think it's appropriate that they should finish things off like they did."

They finished off the Vikings not only by shutting off their running game but by turning quarterback Fran Tarkenton back into a scrambler. He'd sort of lost that image in the last season or two. But in chilly, overcast, windswept Tulane Stadium, he nearly lost a few limbs.

Tarkenton spent virtually the entire afternoon trying to avoid Greene and his linemen. Rarely did he have a chance to set up and scout around for a receiver.

And when he did throw the ball, the Steelers were usually there to spike it back down his throat, tip it away or intercept it. Of his 27 passes, only 11 wound up in a teammate's hands, the end result being 102 off the Vikings' total 123 yards.

Tarkenton had praise for the Steelers' front four:

"They are a devastating group. They were aggressive and had great penetration."

Unlike Tarkenton, Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw usually threw the ball not because he had to but because he wanted to. He completed nine of 14 attempts for 96 yards, four of them coming on a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to tight end Larry Brown that sealed the Vikings' doom.

Harris pounded out 158 yards on 34 carries, breaking the Super Bowl records of 33 carries and 145 yards by Miami's Larry Csonka. He also scored the Steelers' first touchdown on a nine-yard sweep in the third quarter.

The Steelers first points came on a safety in the second quarter when Tarkenton mishandled a pitchout and had to recover the fumble in the end zone where he was immediately surrounded by Pittsburgh tacklers.

The safety, the first in Super Bowl history, was the only scoring in the first half.

But Bradshaw was unconcerned. "We knew the defence was getting the job done and we knew they could keep on doing it. That meant we'd be getting a lot more later on. So we didn't change anything when we came in at the half. We just stuck with what we'd been doing. We knew it had to start working for us sometime."

It started working the moment they got their hands on the ball in the second half, when Bill Brown of the Vikings fumbled away the kickoff. Harris boomed through the left side for 24 yards, then ran in for the touchdown and a 9-0 lead.

It stood up until Matt Blair blocked a Bobby Walden punt early in the fourth quarter and Terry Brown scooped up the ball in the end zone for the Minnesota touchdown.

Fred Cox' extra point was no good, hitting the left upright. So the Vikings trailed by three points instead of two.

The Steelers took the ensuing kickoff and, moving from their own 34-yard line, got into range for Bradshaw's touchdown pass to Brown.

Biggest Margin Ever

POENIX (AP) — Johnny Miller recorded the lowest 72-hole total in 20 years of tournament competition, 260, and added an all-time high winning margin, 14 strokes, to his gaudy collection of records Sunday with an overwhelming triumph in the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Miller combined a final round of 64 with previous scores of 67, 61 and 68 for a 24-under-par total. It was the lowest score on the tour since the record 257 by Mike Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open in San Antonio.

Miller's winning margin was the largest ever recorded on the tour. It wiped out the previous high of 12 strokes by Arnold Palmer in the 1962 Phoenix Open.

And it came over the strongest field this tournament has ever had.

Left straggling in Miller's wake in this first event on the 1975 schedule were such players as U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, PGA king Lee Trevino and million-dollar winners Tom Weiskopf, Billy Casper, Gene Littler and Bruce Crampton.

The field included 14 of the top 15 money winners from last season, with only Jack Nicklaus among the missing.

Ben Kern of London, Ont., finished with a 71 for a 287 total, collecting $460 in prize money.

Will Homenick of Winnipeg and George Knudson of Toronto each won $289 with 281 total, Homenick had a 76 and Knudson a 75 in Sunday's round.

Lead Widened By Scorpions

BURNABY — Victoria Scorpions extended their lead in the Dogwood Inter-City Senior "A" Men's Basketball League Sunday by edging Burnaby-New Westminster Broncos 94-80.

The victory gives the Scorpions a four-point edge over second-place Richmond Ramblers.

Saturday, Broncos stunned the visiting Scorpions by shooting a torrid 73 per cent from the field and defeating the Islanders 109-76.

After scoring only 12 points Saturday, Bob Burrows paced Scorpions Sunday with a 40-point effort. Brian MacKenzie, who scored 22 points Saturday, added 26 for Scorpions. Derek Sankey topped Broncos Sunday with 23 points.

Youthful Prospects Stand Out

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

British Columbia's skaters overwhelmed the rest of the west, but a greater significance to figure skating leaders is the number of outstanding young prospects who have taken their places on the Western Canada regional team.

The team, named after Saturday's windup program in the Western championships at Memorial Arena, is rich in young talent.

Barbara Graham, executive director of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, detected several outstanding prospects who may provide Canada with "strong representation in international competition in the next few years."

One needed only to measure the ages of some of the competitors against their performances on the ice to agree.

First and foremost, there's Susan MacDonald. The calendar made her 15 only five weeks ago. A strong and steady performance on the ice made her the west's senior women's singles champion.

To win, she withstood strong challenges by another pair of 15-year-olds — Deborah Lynn Paul, from the Edmonton suburb of St. Albert, and Peggy McLean of Calgary. They won the silver and bronze, respectively.

The Calgary girl earned highest marks in Saturday's freeskating final to disappoint Victoria's Linda Campbell. The Racquet Club's hope finished fourth and missed a chance to skate in the national finals at Quebec City, Jan. 29-Feb. 2.

But the sweep of the senior women's medals by three 15-year-olds isn't the only reason CFSA officials are looking to the future.

Younger skaters such as Joyce Fordyce and Lisa Mowatt, the 1-2 finishers in the novice women's singles, and 13-year-old Sharon Hallett, give the CFSA other reasons to look ahead.

Not to be overlooked are numerous other teenagers who showed poise, polish and expertise in reaching the nationals.

In addition to MacDonald and Fordyce, the other champions crowned Saturday were Camille Rebus of Edmonton, junior women's singles; Jimmy Szabo of Vancouver, junior men's singles; and 17-year-old Oliver Coomes of the Racquet Club, the novice winner.

Coomes and clubmates Susan Anderson and Jerry Berry, who had won the bronze medal in the junior dance earlier, were the only Victorians named to the 53-member regional team.

Ted Barton of Vancouver, uncontested winner of the senior men's singles, was named the skaters' captain while Joyce Thomas of Victoria was appointed team manager.

Following is the western team:

HAZARDS RUN HIGH

Don't tell Barbara Berzowski or Ron Shaver that figure skating exhibitions aren't hazardous.

The two, among Canada's top-ranked skaters, both suffered injuries at the weekend.

Berezowski, who performed with dance partner David Porter during the Western regional championships at Memorial Arena, fell in practice Friday and injured her knee.

Despite pain, she skated in the exhibition performances Friday and again Saturday.

Her injury, diagnosed as a muscle strain, isn't considered serious.

Shaver, 23, who ranks behind Toller Cranston as one of the world's leading free skaters, suddenly clutched his left leg and limped off the ice while making a guest appearance in the Central Canadian championships at Brandon.

His coach, Neil Carpenter, said Sunday the leg was stiff and sore but he was confident it was not a serious injury.

On the ice, Kevin Hicks, who hasn't been beaten in major competition since 1972, added to his winning streak Saturday by taking the Central region's junior men's singles.

Lee Armstrong of Chatham, Ont., won the men's singles; Heather Kemkaren of Hamilton wasn't challenged but skated her senior women's singles program for judges' comments, and Kathy Fahlgren of North Bay won the junior women's title.

In the Eastern championships at Oshawa, Kim Alleton won the senior women's singles and Stan Bohoniek of Toronto the senior men's title. Deborah Albright and Gary Beacom, also of Toronto, won the junior titles.

COURTENAY, CITY RINKS ADVANCE

Dale Trails By 8 Shots

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — A final-round 73, one under par, enabled Nancy Hager of Dallas to win the 54-hole Harder Hall invitational women's amateur golf tournament by three strokes.

She finished the event with a two-under-par 220. Runner-up Lancy Smith, only a shot off the pace entering the final round, finished with a 75 for 223.

Jane Booth of Whittier, Calif., took third with three straight 75s for 225 and Sylvia Fardon of Tallahassee, Fla., was another stroke behind in fourth after a closing 71.

At 228 was Dale Shaw of Victoria.

PORT ALBERNI — Ole Carlson of Courtenay and Victoria's Gord Hooey are Vancouver Island's representatives in the Pacific Coast Curling Association's senior men's final.

Carlson took the direct route to the Coast finale by winning the "A" side of the double knockout playoff here while the Victorians had to fight back through the "B" bracket.

Carlson, who drew an opening-round bye, climaxed a four-straight march by defeating Victoria's John Innes 9-7 in Saturday's "A" final. Carlson is backed by Dave Hemphill, Walt Hodgins and Len Morrey.

Hooey, who switches positions with Dave Johnston, has Tom Dickson playing second and Dick Pick at lead.

The Victorians defeated George Bayford's Campbell River entry in the "B" semifinals and then, with Johnston throwing skip's rocks, edged Innes 8-7 in the final. Tied coming home, Johnston had to draw to the four-foot to cut out two Innes counters with his last rock.

Earlier, the Hooey rink defeated Duncan's Gord Stewart, who has two-time B.C. champ Gord Moore at third.

Three of the biggest "name" rinks bowed out Saturday when they suffered their second setbacks. They were Victoria's Tony Gutowski, 1958 provincial men's champ; clubmate Gord Walker, 1972 B.C. senior titleholder, and Nanaimo's Gene Koster.

Another Week

After a month break, all three divisions of the Vancouver Island Soccer League will have to wait until next weekend before returning to action. Play scheduled for this past weekend was postponed due to poor field conditions.

Flora Does It the Hard Way

Four Vancouver Island rinks cleared the first hurdle Sunday in women's curling playoffs.

The second, the Island play-downs, come up Friday at Esquimalt's Sports Centre and the four days of rest between competition may be best appreciated by the Flora Martin rink of Victoria.

Advancing to the Island final Sunday with the Martin foursome were Nanaimo rinks skipped by Jessie Whittam and Karen Kaese and a Duncan entry skipped by Isobel Heller.

Martin and Heller emerged victorious in the south district playdowns at Lake Cowichan while the two Nanaimo rinks triumphed in the northern eliminations at Campbell River.

The playoff conditions were toughest for the Martin rink, which includes third Elsie Humphries, second Nita Moody and lead Marie Swanton.

Dropped into the "B" side in the double-knockout play-downs late Saturday, the Victorians started curling at 7 a.m. Sunday. They had to play and win five games in succession to win the south's second berth.

They played 3½ games without their lead when Mrs. Swanton injured her back. Allowed a sweeper, the Victorians reached the "B" final by defeating Duncan's Glenda Barrett 11-10 in their fourth straight game and climaxed their hectic day by defeating clubmate Judy Christensen 7-5.

The Christensen rink also was a game away from the Island final by reaching the "A" final but lost, 9-6, to Heller. Competing the Duncan rink are Carman Wright, Rosalyn Hanna and Nessie McMahon.

'I'm Sure'

"I didn't want to be rubber stamped into a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. An Investors man showed me how a special plan could benefit my special situation."

Jerry Campbell

Jerry Campbell earns his money playing professional football. Happily married and at the height of his career, Jerry is a client of Investors for 5 very good reasons.

Reason #1: With hundreds of ways to organize an RRSP, a trained Investors representative will meet with you in your home and help plan what's best for you. He brings sound knowledge, good services and objective advice.

Reason #2: Investors know how the new wrinkles in the Government budget affect you. The budget brought down in November 1974, made a lot of changes to your personal taxes. These changes can have a great effect not only on tax savings now, but on how much income you will have at retirement.

Reason #3: Investors have safe, flexible investments. Investors is the largest company of its type in Canada with over 300,000 clients. Investors provide each client with a variety of options: guaranteed investment contracts, a mortgage fund and a common stock based mutual fund. Each can form the basis of an RRSP or in combination can be used to form a total financial program.

Reason #4: Investors makes it easier to purchase and simplify tax reporting. There are two basic ways you can start your RRSP program at Investors. A single deposit once a year or a systematic monthly instalment plan. You receive one form at tax time which records all of your tax exempt purchases in the current year.

Reason #5: Investors can provide the financial planning services usually associated with Banks, Stockbrokers, Trust Companies and Insurance Companies. We can help you organize a total financial program.

UVic Hoop Teams Still on Top

A near-perfect game by the Vikings and an air-tight defensive performance by the Vikettes enabled University of Victoria basketball teams to maintain their grip on first place in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's and women's standings Saturday.

Vikings completed a two-game sweep over Saskatchewan Huskies in Saskatoon with an 87-80 triumph, yielding only 10 turnovers in the process. It left coach Gary Taylor's hopefuls with an 8-2 won-lost record and a four-point bulge over second-place Alberta Golden Bears, who have two games in hand.

Vikettes, drubbed 72-38 by Saskatchewan Huskies in Saskatoon Friday night, turned the tables Saturday with a 58-44 victory that kept them two points ahead of Saskatchewan and UBC in the standings. Huskies and Thunderettes both have two games in hand over Vikettes.

It was a big weekend for Vikings' Jim Dudderidge. He led the winners Saturday with 27 points after a 31-point night Friday for a weekend total of 58. Dave Mulachy also turned in a standout performance Saturday for UVic, counting 24 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Tops for Huskies were Roger Gains with 27 points and 11 rebounds and Dean Ferris with 21 points.

Coach Mike Gallo got a complete turnaround from Vikettes Saturday. They held Maureen Wright, who scored 26 points Friday, to only two points Saturday and halved the point total of Huskies' Karen Kusler, who scored 28 Friday.

A fast break by Vikettes had the Huskies, who were unbeaten going into the game, on the ropes. Guard Lorna McHattie led the winners with 25 points, Edna Ritchie added 12 points and eight rebounds and Lynn Pullen topped UVic's rebounder with nine.

Saskatchewan shot only 14 per cent from the floor.

In other Saturday men's games, Alberta beat Lethbridge Pronghorns 74-65 while Calgary Dinosaurs earned a split with UBC Thunderbirds by winning 72-67.

In other women's play Saturday, UBC Thunderettes drubbed Calgary Dinnies 96-28 and Alberta Pandas downed Lethbridge Pronghorns 52-33.

HOW ABOUT A FAIR DEAL FOR C.U.P.E.?

The following table should explain the position of C.U.P.E. Unions in the Greater Victoria area in stark contrast to the villainous reputation given them by some members of the news media, notably the Victorian editor. It should also show the considerable restraint of these union members over the last six years.

LABOUR RATES:	C.U.P.E.	Construction
Jan. 1969	$2.88	$3.88
July, 1974	$4.42	$7.12

An offer has been made to raise this rate by 70c an hour to $5.12 for 1975. The Construction labour rate will go to $7.98 in May 1975.

TRADES RATES:	C.U.P.E.	Construction (Carpenters)
July, 1974	$5.12	$8.10

An offer has been made to raise this rate by 81c to $5.93 for 1975. Nov 1974 $8.34, May 1975 $9.42, Nov. 1975 $9.64.

CLERK TYPIST RATES: July, 1974

C.U.P.E.	H.E.U.	B.C. Gov't
$452	$634	$547
For 1975 C.U.P.E. has been offered $110.00 bringing this rate to $562 without C.O.L.A. clause	For 1975 H.E.U. rate will be $694 plus 1974 C.O.L.A. with a further C.O.L.A. in April 1975.	For 1975 B.C. Gov't rate will be $632 with a C.O.L.A. in April of approx. $70.00

IS IT ANY WONDER THAT C.U.P.E. MEMBERS ARE TIRED OF HOLDING THE LINE AND WANT A LITTLE EQUALITY WITH OTHER WORKERS.

SWEDISH SKIER SNAPS AUSTRIAN DOMINATION

By The Canadian Press
Ingemar Stenmark, an 18-year-old Swede, ended Austrian domination in World Cup ski competition by winning Sunday's men's slalom race at Wengen, Switzerland.

Stenmark also upset Italian followers by edging out defending World Cup champion Piero Gros of Italy by a mere four-hundredths of a second to win the event, his second slalom victory this season.

The Italians, however, had a good day with five men placing among the top 10, including Gustavo Theoni who placed fourth and took the newly-inaugurated Lauberhorn Trophy combined event which was based on Saturday's downhill and Sunday's slalom.

Austrian Franz Klammer, who won Saturday's downhill and holds the lead in the World Cup standings, lost his chance to win the Lauberhorn combination in the opening run with a slow 58.45 seconds. Klammer has 119 World Cup points while runner-up Gros has 95.

Only 44 of a field of 95 competitors finished the race. The only Canadian finisher was Ken Read of Calgary who placed 41st in 1:52.90.

On Saturday, it was an Austrian sweep with Klammer taking the men's downhill for the fourth consecutive time and Annemarie Proell-Moser winning the women's giant slalom.

Mrs. Proell-Moser, 21, won the Staulen Cup giant slalom at Grindelwald and appeared a cinch to take the women's overall World Cup title for the fifth straight year. She has won five of eight races so far this season.

Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., was the only non-European entry to collect a point. She finished in a 10th-place tie with Martine Ducroz of France in 1:23.55.

Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., was 23rd in 1:25.13 and Betsy's sister, Susan, was 34th in 1:26.33. Canada's overall points total is 33—the women have 31—for 10th place.

Jim Hunter of Calgary was 16th in 2:41.74 in the men's downhill; Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay 31st in 2:44.21 and Gary Aiken of Trail, 36th in 2:44.78.

Ken Grexton, Lorna Pollock Pace Bowlers

Lorna Pollock and Ken Grexton will lead the Victoria delegation to the provincial tenpin bowling championships, which will be held Jan. 26 in Vancouver.

Pollock earned the women's berth in the scratch event by firing a 10-game total of 1,805 over the weekend in the Victoria regionals at Mayfair Lanes.

Grexton won the men's scratch berth with a 1,984 total.

In the handicap section for women, Marie Stephenson (1,363 for six games), Barbara Johnston (1,333) and Mary Hebden (1,310) will go to the provincials.

Joe Smith led the three male handicap qualifiers for the provincials with a six-game total of 1,474. Steve Gabbett was second with 1,458 and Dave Thomson third with 1,430.

PROVINCIAL COACHES IN CLASS

All three Victoria-based provincial sports coaches — John Olsen (basketball), Bill McAllister (soccer) and Vic Lindal (volleyball) — were in Saskatoon on the weekend to participate in the inaugural Western Canada instructors' course in the coaching development certification program.

This new program, developed by the Canadian Coaches' Association, is designed to be the base of coaching in any sport.

Olsen, McAllister and Lindal will be responsible for implementing the program at the school and club level throughout British Columbia.

Killy Recovering After Operation
 ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Professional skier Jean Claude Killy of France is reported in excellent condition at a local hospital after having his gall bladder removed.

Killy, who missed much of the 1974 skiing season because of an internal disorder caused by a defective gall bladder, is expected to return to competitive skiing in approximately a month.

Goalie Departs
 KAMLOOPS (CP) — Kamloops Chiefs' goaltender Mike Priestner, 19, of Calgary has quit the team.

Lack of ice time was cited as his reason for leaving the Western Canada Hockey League team. Priestner came to the Chiefs earlier this season on waivers from Calgary Centennials after quitting that club because he was relegated to second-stringer.

Nixon: A Beaten, Exiled Man Locked in a Cell

LOS ANGELES — Richard Nixon is a "beaten man," harried by vindictive bureaucrats and in effect locked in a cell, a political prisoner and exile on his estate at San Clemente, Ronald Ziegler says.

"What is happening to Richard Nixon as a human being is very serious" because of the way he has been treated since resigning the presidency, said Ziegler, Nixon's top aide.

"The fact that he has survived this period to me is remarkable."

Ziegler who was closer to Nixon than any other assistant in the final days of his presidency and has been his chief aide since, gave his first lengthy, public interview to the Los Angeles Times. It was printed Sunday.

Ziegler bitterly criticized the government for its treatment of Nixon, especially financially, and the charges that Nixon escaped punishment for Watergate, while his top assistants face, or have already served, prison terms.

"He resigned in disgrace. He is certainly a beaten man," Ziegler said.

"What severity of penalty does this society want from a leader? If Society wants to put him in a cell, there is a cell out there," Ziegler said, pointing toward Nixon's estate.

"Have you seen the size of his office? What more is wanted?"

"It's the first American political exile — self imposed, certainly self imposed — but certainly exile. You only have to be here to sense it is exile — the abandonment by friends, the isolation, the vindictiveness of some in Washington, including some in Congress and some in the Ford White House," Ziegler said.

However, Ziegler made a point of saying that he does not think that President Ford himself has been "vindictive" or knows how his aide's remainder of the flight to California.

"That's absurd," Ziegler said. "It is unbelievable. He was president when he left Washington. What was he supposed to do — alight in Jefferson City and make his way out here by train?"

Ziegler said Nixon is only "slowly" recovering from his surgery in October, and is not yet well enough to begin work on his memoirs, but that when he does "it will be a very important piece of history — not a book justifying him, but a very, very important book."

Cold Pizza and Gospel Tunes Sustained This Family

FERGUS FALLS, Minn.—A peanut butter sandwich, an apple, two cold slices of pizza and some gospel tunes were all the Sundberg family had to sustain them during their 34-hour wait for rescue from a stalled car.

The car containing Bruce Sundberg, his wife and two children and a family friend, stalled just north of here and sat on the road until discovered by snowplow crews.

"We prayed very hard for God to tell us what to do," Sundberg said. He said the family sang gospel tunes to keep up morale.

NEW WESTMINSTER — A taxi driver who used his vehicle to attack a rival for his ex-girl friend's affection has been jailed for nine months.

Thomas Lloyd was charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle following the incident on Aug. 3 last year. At the time, Lloyd was answering a taxi call when he drove past his ex-girl friend's home and encountered the new man in her life. After a name-calling through the window of the taxi, Lloyd turned the vehicle around and drove down the sidewalk, chasing the man before him.

William Bariko was knocked down and slightly injured.

TACOMA, Wash.—At 102, Walter Jones has bought a 22-foot motor home and says he'll hit the road this spring to see the United States. "I roamed 40 states when I was young," Jones said. "I've always wanted to see them all, and that's what I'm going to do."

POITIERS—A farmer's wife, armed with a pitchfork, wounded a magic practitioner whom she accused of being responsible for the deaths of three farm animals, police said Sunday. Aimee Heraud, 56, suspected the man of having cast a spell on her farm.

ROME—Italy's premier says his government has offered political asylum to deposed Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

Premier Aldo Moro, replying to an inquiry by an Italian senator, said the Italian government has pleaded "in a discreet but firm way" with Ethiopia's military leaders on behalf of the 82-year-old former emperor.

OTTAWA—Prime Minister Trudeau and his family returned Sunday evening from a two-week vacation in the Caribbean islands.

With his wife, Margaret, and sons Justin and Sacha, the Prime minister left Ottawa Dec. 28 after spending Christmas in Vancouver, the home of Mrs. Trudeau's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sinclair.

LONDON—"It sounds rather good, don't you think?" said Charlie Chaplin, 85, when asked what he felt about being called "Sir Charlie."

Cheerful and jaunty although he was in a wheelchair, Chaplin returned during the weekend to get ready for a Royal Command performance at Buckingham Palace where he will receive knighthood from Queen Elizabeth II. Chaplin and his wife, Oona, arrived from Geneva for a week's stay.

SALEM, Ore.—Gov. Tom McCall, prohibited by the state constitution from seeking a third consecutive term, is taking a $30,000 job teaching journalism at Oregon State University.

The Republican governor, who will leave office Monday, is a former Portland newspaper and broadcast reporter and commentator.

BATON ROUGE, La.—The Yankees swiped a statue of George Washington from the Louisiana capital in 1862 and N. R. Giscle has filed suit to get it back.

"The plundering of this statue cannot be considered a legitimate act of war," said his petition, filed here in U.S. District Court.

The petition asked that copies be served on President Abraham Lincoln or his successor.

He Didn't Want To Get Involved

VENTURA, Calif.—Barbaru Wilson, 46, had been trapped with injured leg for four days at the bottom of an isolated canyon after her car went off a mountain road, when the man appeared, walking his dog.

He was strolling along 500 feet above her, on the road where she lost control of her auto Jan. 6. She had no food or water, and only the floor mats from her car for shelter from the mountain cold.

"I yelled to him and he said he didn't want to get involved and walked away," Mrs. Wilson told highway patrolman Al Goldberg, who rescued her from the canyon Sunday, after she had been trapped six days.

"He said anyone who would drive on that road deserved whatever they got," she said. Mrs. Wilson, of Ventura, "was conscious and alert and in amazing condition when we got to her," Goldberg said Sunday.

"She was waving her arms at us and yelling when we arrived. She was talking quite a bit and laughing by the time we got her to the hospital."

TAKEOVERS OPPOSED

LONDON (CP) — Two-thirds of British workers oppose nationalization of their employers' business, a poll published by the London Times indicated today.

When asked whether they favored nationalization of the firm for which they worked, 67 per cent of workers polled said they opposed nationalization. Eighteen per cent said they favored it. Fifteen per cent had no opinion.

In answering another question, 45 per cent of workers queried said they believed their firm would show poorer operating results if it were nationalized. Twenty per cent said the results would be better. Thirty-five per cent had no opinion.

The poll was conducted by the Opinion Research Centre, which interviewed 2,083 persons working in firms employing more than 20 workers. The firms were scattered throughout Britain.

MANY CANADIANS SEE A TROUBLED YEAR

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Fifty-six per cent of the Canadian public predict a "troubled year with much international discord," says a Gallup Poll international survey.

Thirty per cent of Canadians queried in a nine-country study predicted peace while 14 per cent were undecided.

Sixty-one per cent of those asked in the United States were also pessimistic.

The study showed only the British are more pessimistic than Americans about chances for world peace in 1975, with 69 per cent of the Britons polled predicting trouble ahead.

In the United States, 29 per cent said they think 1975 will be a "peaceful year, more or less free of international disputes," while 10 per cent had no opinion.

In Britain, 14 per cent of those surveyed predict peace, while no opinion was offered by 17 per cent.

Skull Tested for Link With Diving Hijacker

OREGON CITY, Ore. (AP) — A human skull found in the Mount Hood National Forest has been examined to see whether it might belong to a skydiving hijacker known as Dan Cooper, but authorities say it is highly unlikely it is that of Cooper.

Dr. Larry Lewman, deputy Oregon medical examiner, said today the skull appears to be that of a white male in his 30s.

The man identified as Cooper was believed to be in his late 40s or early 50s.

The FBI said the flight pattern and winds the night of the hijacking more than three years ago also make it improbable that the skull is that of the skyjacker.

A man using the name Dan Cooper hijacked a Northwest Airlines jet Nov. 24, 1971, and parachuted out with $200,000 ransom money.

He was never found, and the money never recovered. It is not known whether he survived the jump.

If he survived, he is the only hijacker in the United States who has not been captured or killed.

The skull was found east of Estacada Thursday by a hiker and turned over to the sheriff's department.

The idea that the skull might belong to Cooper spread when the man who found the skull reported a parachute in a nearby tree.

Crewmen Win 150% Wage Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twenty-three crewmen who serve on the Liberian freighter Irel Hercules have won wage adjustments of more than $10,000.

Tom McGrath, business agent for Seamen's Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said Friday he was able to secure a standard international transport federation agreement from the ship owners to cover the seamen.

McGrath, ITF representative in Vancouver, said the agreement provides wage increases of 150 per cent in wages and overtime rates for the men.

Conference Table On Hanoi's Terms Offensive's Goal

SAIGON (WP) — The Communists are now conducting a limited military offensive with the goal of forcing the Saigon administration to the conference table on Communist terms sometime this year, according to Hanoi watchers here.

If they are successful, this might mean the establishment of some sort of coalition government which the Communists would arrange in such a way as to be sure of taking over, the analysts say.

This could take place outside the framework of the Paris Accord or more likely within it by the establishment of the National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord, which under the terms of the accord was supposed to be set up after the ceasefire to arrange for national elections in the South.

But political talks between the Communists and the government that were supposed to have led to the establishment of the national council have broken down.

President Nguyen Van Thieu has repeatedly urged the rapid formation of the national council to function purely as an electoral commission that would quickly hold elections and then disband.

He has done so because his government has controlled most of South Vietnam's population during the nearly two years since the signing of the Paris agreement and Thieu has been sure of winning such an election, analysts say.

The Communists, on the other hand, not sure of winning a quick election, have seen the national council as an "administrative structure" that would form the beginnings of a coalition arrangement that they could hope to dominate, according to the analysts.

Thus there has been an impasse in the political talks that has continued with neither side gaining predominance on the battlefield.

But now the equation is changing in favor of the Communists.

They are winning on the country's battlefields and have every prospect of continuing to do so in the absence of new infusions of U.S. military aid.

The current dry season of tensive is an annual affair that has been planned for some time, but its intensity was greatly increased by the Communists after the failure of Thieu's internal political opposition to topple him late last year, analysts say.

At the same time they attack on the battlefield, the Communists are saying that they will not negotiate with Thieu but only with his successor after he is overthrown internally.

Economic Pinch Discourages Local Flower Dealers

By AB KENT
Times Staff

When Christmas roses can be flown from Israel cheaper than domestic and U.S. blooms, you know there's trouble in the greenhouse business.

That's what happened this season thanks to North American inflation, and the economies of scale in overseas operations.

Local growers and flower dealers agree the costs of raising flower crops here are reaching the point of discouragement, and like southern Ontario, many growers have left the business or are turning to more lucrative greenhouse crops.

Few are in the position of Raymond Perks, of Perks Florist and Garden Centre, who raises his own stock and retails it, enabling him to survive longer by adjusting his selling prices.

But retailers working through a wholesaler are finding the selling price can take only a marginal hike compared with the doubling and tripling of production costs, due to the risk of pricing flowers into the luxury category.

Victoria Times

MONDAY, JANUARY 13, 1975 17

SECOND SECTION

When cut flower prices go too high, nobody buys, dealers find.

The trend is toward declining profit for growers who have tried switching into the potted plant business or are turning more to vegetables such as hydroponically-grown tomatoes.

And the wholesalers are buying more from the large-scale producers of the lower mainland, California and even Europe and Israel.

Perks doubts the greenhouse cut flower business will remain much longer locally.

His views are supported by one of the largest operators on Vancouver Island, Ian Vantreight, general manager of Vantreight Farms.

"It's getting more and more unfeasible to grow flowers in a greenhouse. It's becoming a non-viable industry," Vantreight said.

He blamed other factors besides the overhead, which incidentally has meant a tripling of fuel oil costs for some growers. Vantreight points to unfair competition of Dutch stock, which the government-owned KLM Dutch Airline flies for undercut prices, and to the different habits of flower-buyers in Canada.

In Europe he said, 25 per cent of the population buys flowers to take home at least weekly. Here, fewer than 5 per cent buy flowers that frequently, and when the price jumps, sales lag.

"We've had a couple of bad years and right now the outlook is not good," Vantreight added.

Harborcrest Greenhouses said its operating costs had about doubled in the past year, especially heating and labor outlays.

To compensate, the company decided to consolidate and increase efficiency. Most of its business is direct-sale mail orders for tropicals, cactus, orchids and African violets, and the remainder is put to auction once a week at United Flower Growers cooperative in Vancouver.

Archie Bain Tropical Plants is another specialist which has been able to meet higher production costs with price increases, which are up about 10 per cent from last year. But the greenhouse grows no cut flowers, just potted house plants.

Murray Saunders, general manager of Jones Wholesale Floral Co. Ltd., finds that over the last five years his firm is getting only about half what it used to obtain from local growers, but some of this apparent shrinkage is brought about by a rise in the firm's volume of business.

Demand for potted plants before Christmas was strong, and in addition to local sources, Jones bought 5,000 pots from lower mainland growers.

Local cut flower production is limited almost entirely to the spring varieties such as daffodils and tulips, and for the other staples such as carnations, chrysanthemums and gladioli, Jones turns to California.

The roses for Christmas came from Israel because the quality was high, delivery quicker, and the cost about two-thirds of California prices, Saunders said.

He thinks the market here could support one large, first-class flower-growing opera-

Heat for Cold Wedlock The Old-Fashioned Way

Honestly, I did not intend to inflict on you a second essay about marriage, but I have before me a booklet sent along by a woman reader in the James Bay district who, noting my reference to 37 years in the ring, writes, "This advice has been helpful in my own 40 years of marriage and may be worth passing along to your readers." Darned if I don't think she's right.

The booklet is under the somewhat surprising patronage of the British Medical Association, is titled simply, "Getting Married" and contains some advice from its editor, one Dr. Harvey Flack, that seems highly unlikely from a medical man, though it may be just what the doctor ordered.

"Love may not conquer all," writes Dr. Flack, clearly a fine, sentimental fellow, "but just being in love makes a lot of problems fall into perspective and the most desperate difficulty can look very small skittles if you hold each other close."

"Getting married is still the most exciting thing any two young people can do," he goes on. "They should remember that kissing is the way to ease stress and discord. I would recommend it when mother-in-law troubles beset a couple. And middle-aged couples should kiss more often."

"I have been recommending kissing as a cure for marriage troubles for many years," he concludes. "Most other doctors agree with me."

And so, within reason, do I.

True, there are some couples who have so many troubles that if they relied on this therapy to ease them all they might well spend the rest of their lives locked in an embrace which, if nothing else, could be mighty fatiguing.

Still, I think what Dr. Flack has in mind is not so much the actual salute of love as it is the maintenance of romance in matrimony. Without that the kiss is cold comfort.

It has come to be the custom in North America to think of marriage much as we think of the two-stage rocket. The first stage is spectacular, full of the fireworks and excitement of the love affairs that began them. The second, or orbit, stage is predictable. The affair becomes a partnership. The romance becomes a working arrangement. The marriage goes on its way, making bleep-bleep-bleep sounds, until the end.

This sort of thing can be comfortable and, having adjusted their own personalities to each other, which is a necessity in every marriage, the husband and wife may arrive at complete compatibility. But all too often it extinguishes the flame of the blast-off that got it on its way. Without that heat a marriage may lose a lot of its meaning.

Dr. Flack's advice may sound rather embarrassing to a people as undemonstrative as we are in these northern climes.

I fancy that if some conscience-stricken husband, reading this on the homeward bound bus tonight, were to put it into practice his wife might phone instantly to the nearest constabulary or psychiatrist.

But it could be a reminder to most of us, which I fancy is the aim of my James Bay reader, that we're guilty of some neglect in keeping alive the romantic aspect of our marriages.

If you asked any honest group of people if they felt that they were really working at marriage, as they work at careers or bowling scores, for example, you'd doubtless get a pretty thin show of hands.

One can speculate on how many cooling or cold marriages could be warmed up if the husband were to spend as much time and energy on the job as he spends cutting down his golf handicap. Or how many might recapture some of the old magic if a wife were to concentrate less on her house-keeping and more on those charms that got her the lout in the first place.

There are many other suggestions in the booklet, including one by a Dr. Dick Glover who contends that wives should be paid a regular salary by their husbands, but if kisses will do it we need not go into other radical ideas.

City Shoplifters Aren't Stealing The Necessities

By SUSAN RUTAN
Times Staff

Is the inflation-recession squeeze forcing Victoria residents to shoplift to provide for their loved ones?

Nonsense, say police and security officials.

For one thing, Victoria's shoplifters aren't stealing the necessities of life they can't afford to buy.

They're taking pocket calculators, lipsticks, sweaters, even skis.

"Some of our best-dressed people are shoplifters," a security officer for one of the city's major downtown department stores said wryly in an interview.

They can afford to be — they don't pay for their clothes.

For another thing, local shoplifters aren't always hard up for cash.

Almost all adults and many juveniles caught shoplifting have enough money to pay for the stolen item, said Detective Inspector Richard Ward of the Victoria police.

"It seems to be a kind of sickness with people," he said. They seem to be overwhelmed with the temptation to get something for nothing.

The security officer, who asked that his name be withheld, said shoplifters range from age nine to 90, and include housewives, doctors, lawyers, people on welfare, and teenagers.

Biggest single group is probably unemployed young people around 18 to 20, he said.

"There are people who live off the stores," he said.

These are the ones who steal items, then return them to the store for a cash refund.

Security officers try to cooperate to keep an eye on known shoplifters, and warn each other when any are headed toward their store, he said.

Then there are the teenaged girls who steal clothes to keep up with their peers at school, the transients who pick up a few items, the tourists who steal a memento or two of Victoria.

The downtown stores are the hardest hit by shoplifting. Most of them now prosecute everyone they catch stealing, whether it's a fur coat or a bottle of shampoo.

A store away from downtown like Woodward's, for example, suffers much less, according to a Woodward's spokesman.

In fact, he thinks Woodward's losses from stealing have actually declined in recent years.

Probable reason, he said, is the $250 fines the courts are now giving convicted shoplifters.

Yet everyone admits the roughly 500 shoplifting cases the Victoria police handle each year represent a tiny fraction of the stealing that goes on.

The self-service store has made shoplifting comparatively easy. And in the crush of Christmas shoppers, swiping items off store counters is even easier, so the holiday season was the time of greatest loss for stores.

In the United States, where both crime and the recession are worse than in Victoria, shoplifting this year has become one of the fastest-growing crimes, costing merchants $3 billion annually.

Some police officials and businessmen there are convinced that the recession has had much to do with the rise.

Janitors Favor Workload Pact

Janitors employed by Greater Victoria school board voted in favor Sunday of an agreement on workloads and end a dispute which resulted in two closures of night school rentals last fall.

The agreement, tentatively negotiated last Friday with the assistance of two Relations Board, provides for members of the B.C. Labor no change in present staffing, extra time for servicing rentals and adjustment of man-hours in any school by mutual agreement.

The agreement must also be ratified by the school board but this is expected because

Both of Victoria's general hospitals are crowded today and the administrator at one of them said quality of patient care must be affected eventually if pressure experienced recently continues.

At one point last week patients who had to be admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital were being temporarily housed two at a time in treatment rooms.

"We even had to put one old soul in a linen closet — of course they were out to lunch (under anesthesia) so it didn't bother them," said one nurse.

At Victoria General Hospital today, half a dozen cases of elective surgery had to be cancelled to make beds available for emergency and urgent cases.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee, detailed today one 24-hour period last week in which 29 of the 120 patients seen in the emergency department had to be admitted to hospital.

From 4 p.m. to midnight that day 58 patients were treated in emergency and 18 of them, far above average, had to be admitted.

At one stage, he said, six people were waiting in emergency rooms for hospital beds. Two of the six were unconscious from drug overdoses and on respirators, two with chest pains were potential heart attack cases, one had a severe head injury and one was an acute abdominal emergency.

While it's no hardship for a patient to be located in a treatment room, a sort of base station where nurses prepare medication, it complicates the work done there no end, said Pickles. In some situations there were two patients in a treatment room.

"It puts a very severe stress on the staff," he said.

"You can get through by everyone pitching in but if it continued, in the long haul it's bound to effect patient care eventually."

The medical, surgical and pediatrics wards of the hospital are full today, as are the intensive care and coronary care units as well as Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care, he added.

John Murray, assistant executive director at Victoria General, said the hospital is also full and particularly busy in the emergency department today.

Most cases there involve elderly people with pneumonia and complications and there is also an unusual number of suspected cancer cases.

As last week, elective surgery, meaning non-emergency operations, had to be cancelled to make room for them, he said.

Not-Guilty Plea In Break-In Case

A 22-year-old man pleaded not guilty today in Provincial Court to eight counts of breaking and entering within a three-day period.

Murray S. Morin, address not known, was charged with breaking into eight Victoria and Saanich service stations between Wednesday and Friday of last week.

Trial will be Feb. 12. Judge William Ostler released Morin on $500 bail and ordered him to obey a midnight curfew until trial is over.

Noise Prompts Tree Plan

Corrine Bush intends to plant trees to beautify Craigflower Road and muffle traffic noise—even if it means purchasing those trees herself.

Bush, of 1320 Coventry Ave., is being assisted by her husband Henry Edwards, in planning boulevard planting.

"Craigflower is a major artery," he said. "The noise from that road is tremendous and the area is solid residential. There's a terrific noise pollution problem."

"It's nobody's fault that the problem is there, but nobody's doing anything about it, either."

They believe that elm trees planted now would successfully suppress traffic sounds in about five years.

"There's no question—they really suppress noise," said Edwards.

Bush has already priced 14-foot elm and maple trees and says, "We'll buy them in lots of 10, for $50 to $60."

"But you can't plant on a parkway without permission," she said.

She wrote Victoria city officials last fall and received a cautious reply indicating the matter would be considered in January. Bush is now awaiting further reply from the city parks department.

"Neighborhoods always look better with trees," she said. "All it takes is a little bit of foresight."

If permission is granted, the first trees would likely be planted on Craigflower near Coventry, spaced between small chestnut trees already growing in some spots.

"Eventually I'd like to do all of Craigflower," said Bush. "It could be a very pretty street."

In lieu of permission she would welcome a decision by the city to take over the planting project but said she would gladly bear both the cost and time to do it herself.

"One person can do so much," she said.

No-Soap Opera

DEAR ABBY: I have two little boys and a dirty husband, Sheldon, my husband, doesn't like to bathe. I keep the house clean and the boys and I are immaculate, but I can't seem to convince Sheldon that he needs to keep himself clean.

He bathes only for hockey. If he has a game or hockey practice, he'll take a bath. But, Abby, that's not often enough for me.

Does a wife have to make love to a husband who smells bad? What on earth is wrong with a 25-year-old man who acts like this? — Hockey Nut's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Obviously, he doesn't care for water unless it's frozen. There's an outside chance that he's sick. Otherwise he's simply childish, lazy and inconsiderate. No, a wife doesn't have to make love to a husband who smells bad, so if you can't make him more fragrant with a little soft soap, your marriage could be all washed up.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer an alternate solution to "Mama's Girl," the bride-to-be who didn't want her father to give her away?

I am to be married in May, and my situation parallels hers. My parents were divorced 11 years ago, and my mother raised me alone during those difficult years. My mother received no alimony, very little support money, and no help whatsoever from my father (who could easily have afforded all three).

Traditionally, the man to give the bride away should be the man who gave her his financial, emotional and moral support. My father does not deserve that honor. But my boss of five years does, so I have asked him to give me away. He said he would be honored.

When the clergyman asks, "Who gives this woman in marriage," I have instructed my boss to reply, "Her mother and I do."

I believe that this will not only be an acceptable solution to the problem, but will also give my mother the credit due her.

In some ways I shall always be "Mama's girl," but in this respect, I consider myself — My Own Woman.

DEAR ABBY: I am a part-time working mother. On nine separate occasions I have tried to find a reliable housekeeper. They have all left for one reason or another.

Friends of ours had a housekeeper in their home for six months. Then they said that she was incompetent to care for their children, so they let her go and then they promptly left for a month's vacation.

Knowing the young woman and liking her (and also being desperate), I hired her.

When my friends returned from their vacation they let me know that they were very angry because I had hired their former housekeeper. The wife said it was a slap in the face to her that I didn't trust her opinion when she said the woman was not competent to care for children.

Now the friendship is ruined. And my husband and I are upset because we enjoyed a very nice relationship with this family. Was I wrong in hiring this woman? — Wondering.

DEAR WONDERING: No. And if your friendship was that fragile, you haven't lost much.

DEAR ABBY: Where I work, the boss's wife (who also works here) set up a new dress code. All the women have to wear pants! This isn't a warehouse or a factory where pants would be more appropriate — it's an office!

The boss happens to be a leg man, and his wife knows it. She has terrible looking legs, and doesn't want him looking at girls who have pretty legs. (Like me, for instance.)

Anyway, several of us gals don't like to hide our legs in pants.

The boss takes his orders from his wife, and anyone who breaks the code gets the axe. Any suggestions? — Leggy.

DEAR LEGGY: I'm afraid you gals with the gorgeous gams will have to do your showing off after work. Either that, or use 'em to walk but and find work where the dress code makes more sense.

(P.S. If you're union, maybe you've got a legitimate beef.)

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By Dr. WILLIAM J. WELCH

When I hear from a patient that a doctor "hit the ceiling" when he was asked to call in a consultant, there is one thing I am sure of: the doctor is a dud! He is incompetent, or cancelled, or afraid, or all three.

No doctor worth his salt hides behind the mask of an all-knowing, solitary healer — especially in these days of rapidly expanding knowledge and increasing specialization. A perceptive doctor today, when faced with a serious medical problem, even when it is not life-threatening, is usually the first to suggest advice and counsel from a doctor more deeply versed in the problem at hand.

There are many circumstances absolutely requiring the help of a specialist, and there are many in which the necessity may not be absolute, but in which the intervention of outside advice and counsel can make all the difference in the world to the patient and his or her family.

Yet there clearly lingers in the land a tendency on the part of some doctors to take offense when the family tentatively suggests that perhaps another opinion on Dad's heart attack would reassure them, or that they are wondering if Mom's stomach complaints might be benefited by seeing a consultant.

No first-rate general practitioner or nonspecialized internist is going to try to treat acute leukemia for example without a specialist in blood diseases calling the shot, any more than a general surgeon untrained in neurosurgery would operate on a brain tumor.

These circumstances are perfectly clear and no question arises. But some doctors are apt to get fussy when they are in what they consider to be their own field, and the family or the patient betrays what seems to the doctor to be a lack of confidence in him.

In such a dilemma the good doctor, even if he feels mildly affronted, will swallow his pride and call in a colleague to go over the case. If he is an experienced and perceptive doctor, he will already have sensed the insecurity of his patient, or of the family, and will have suggested a consultation before they do — even though he may feel quite sure that everything is going as it should.

In many of the more sophisticated medical centers, some think that perhaps too many consultations are called, one for each office of the body, and one each for the kidney, the gut, the lungs, the heart, the thyroid, ad absurdum. And sometimes the poor patient wonders which one is his own doctor. Nor is this without reason for futile fragmentation can result if no one doctor is in charge.

The ideal answer to medical care and consultation these days is quite simple, however difficult it sometimes seems to achieve.

It involves one doctor you trust and a range of specialists available to him when he sees that you need their help. Such conditions should and can exist for all of us.

Before you jump into macramé, you must master the basic knots. Start by making hanging samplers, mixing and matching knots. You will quickly move to more decorative hangings and bells.

A. Mounting Cords: A base cord is knotted on both ends and is pinned to a cardboard.

1. Fold a long length of cord in half behind the base cord. 2. Ends are looped over base cord and through loop. 3. Cords are pulled tightly on the base cord.

B. The Half-Hitch: 1. The left cord is held tight, right cord swings over it. 2. Right cord goes behind left and over itself. Pull.

D. The Diagonal Double Half-Hitch: 1. The double half-hitch is knotted the same way as the horizontal half-hitch, except that the left cord is held on a 45-degree angle. 2. Continue across with all cords.

F. The Square Knot: 3. After the half knot, bring the right cord under the two middle cords and over the left cord. 4. The left cord goes under the right, over the middle cords, and through the loop on the right. Pull taut.

DEAR WORRIED: No reason, at all.

Lovely Curves Hidden Beneath Rolls of Fat

(This is the sixth in a series of 13 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of Why Grow Old? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.)

Will the REAL Mrs. Ms. or Miss Beautiful please — come out? Underneath the bulges and rolls of fat lie lovely curves which are every woman's natural heritage. If you have lost yours, why not rediscover them with diet and exercise during the next eight weeks? You will join thousands of other women who are determined to do just that.

A more youthful figure is waiting for you. Perhaps you gained a few pounds but they did not seem too important. Then a few more arrived where they were least welcome. Before long your eyes may have become accusatory to your more matronly appearance. Why settle for less attractiveness and less vitality than that which is available to you?

This is the sixth day of my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan (BIP for short). Those readers who are following this course now know how much they should lose and what measurements they wish to streamline. They are off to a flying start! Today I want to call your attention to the lunches in the menus I am publishing.

These are especially planned to be taken to work or to be kept in the refrigerator for an easy lunch at home. They need not be frozen, but this is a good idea if you are going to take them to work and have no refrigerator at the office. The frozen food will thaw out between leaving for work and lunch time. If you eat your mid-day meal at home, you may find it a convenience to fix several sandwiches at one time and freeze them.

There can be a tremendous difference in the calorie count of sandwiches. Some are so high in calorie content that a dieter should not consider them, or even dream of them. On the other hand these need not be such saboteurs of beauty.

When making your sandwiches use thinly sliced bread. There is one on the market that is almost too thin to hold a filling. Buy one of the moderately thin-sliced brands, about 40 calories a slice. You can get this in whole wheat bread now.

Of course, the salad dressing you use is crucial. I have urged you to buy only diet dressings. Be sure it really is a low-calorie item. "Only 30 calories to a teaspoon" may not sound like much but it is only about 3 calories less than the usual kind. Herbs, mustard and thinly sliced sour pickles add flavor.

If you wish to make your own salad dressings here are recipes for two of them.

COOKED SALAD DRESSING
(About 15 calories per tablespoon.)

You will need ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon mustard, a few grains cayenne pepper, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons margarine, ¾ cup skim milk, 1 egg, lightly beaten, ¼ cup vinegar.

Sift the dry ingredients, add margarine, milk, egg, and vinegar. Cook in a double boiler until mixture begins to thicken. Cool and store in a covered jar in the refrigerator. This makes about 1½ cups.

TOMATO JUICE FRENCH DRESSING
(About 4 calories per tablespoon.)

You will need cut garlic bud, ½ cup tomato juice, 3 tablespoons grated onion, juice 1½ lemons, 3 tablespoons catsup or chili sauce, 2 tablespoons sugar.

Rub the salad bowl with the garlic bud, and discard. Combine all ingredients and store in the refrigerator in a covered jar. Alter amounts of ingredients to suit your taste, but do not increase the amount of sugar. Substitute a little garlic salt for the cut a n d, if you wish, or can-can or buttermilk for the tomato juice. Shake well before using. Makes about 2 cups.

When making sandwiches to freeze use only freshly made fillings and freeze the sandwich as soon as it is made. Eat it as soon after it is thawed. Some of the fillings suitable for frozen sandwiches are those made with meat, poultry, fish, hard-cooked eggs and cheese. In order to avoid soggy spread the bread all the way to the edges with butter or margarine (very lightly).

MENUS FOR TUESDAY
Breakfast: 1 cup cooked Farina, serve with ½ cup skim milk and 2 tsp. brown sugar, 6 oz. grapefruit juice, black coffee or tea with lemon.

Lunch: cottage cheese deli: ½ cup cottage cheese mixed with 1 tsp. chopped parsley and 4 radishes, chopped; dress with 1 T. diet mayonnaise or your favorite low-calorie dressing. Spread between two pieces rye or pumpernickel bread. 1 cup skim milk or buttermilk.

Dinner: 1 rib lamb chop (3 oz. without bone) sautéed in 1 tsp. margarine. 1 cup cooked cauliflower or broccoli (season broccoli with lemon juice and cauliflower with parsley or rosemary), 1 medium baked potato with 1 tsp. margarine, 1 cup blueberries with ¼ cup skim milk (optional: artificial sweetener).

You can have all of the following you want, anytime: celery, carrot or cucumber sticks, endive, cauliflower buds, watercress, diet carbohydrate drinks, radishes, bouillon, lettuce, green pepper, tea with lemon or black coffee.

It's not too late! You can still join thousands of women who are going to see how much more attractive they can be at the end of eight weeks. ## Solutions on Global Scale

Delving deep into the accumulation of bits and pieces in that work basket on my desk, I've discovered a pamphlet that asks us to help preserve the planet Earth for all mankind.

It was given me toward the end of last year by an attractive, dark-eyed young miss named Anne Axworthy, executive director of World Federalists of Canada, when she was here on a brief one-day visit.

It's from her desk in the national office of the organization in Ottawa, that she directs the activities of 18 branches across Canada, Victoria to Halifax. A position she stepped into from that of editor of the Canadian section of the World Federalist magazine.

Actually our meeting was very informal. It took place in a corner of the living room at the Victoria Avenue home of Boyce Gaddes, present head of the Victoria branch.

Up to then I knew very little about World Federalists. But after listening to that enthusiastic young director for the best part of an hour, I was well clued in on what this volunteer, non-partisan organization believes are world problems and what it thinks can be done about them.

At the time I didn't use anything from that interview. However, looking at the pamphlet again and at some scribbled notes I saved with it — and remembering the troubled state of the world as it steps ahead into 1975 — I think you would hear something of Anne Axworthy's thought and beliefs — now.

She told me (as does the pamphlet) that "the most important business on earth is the management of our planet for the safety and well being of all mankind."

AXWORTHY ... man's safety vital

Also she reminded me, very earnestly, that the rule of force among nations, like the rule of force among individuals, creates anarchy.

Then she warned that "world anarchy had a nuclear fuse attached to it."

That's "pretty frightening," she said, "when you think how easy it would be for something to go wrong in those countries that have nuclear power or for that matter, in other countries that are in the process of acquiring it."

One thoughtless move, one person "going off half-cocked and pushing the panic button" and where would we be, she asked me.

What did World Federalists believe should be done to minimize the chance of such a mishap, I wanted to know.

"Stop nuclear proliferation," was her immediate answer.

How would that be done? Through a super-national body (a governing world community) with the authority needed to control unlimited proliferation.

National governments are no longer capable of safeguarding the condition of human existence, she believed. New world institutions — "a new United Nations" — must be created to cope with the common needs and the common dangers of the world's people.

It was about then that Miss Axworthy fished out of her brief case the pamphlet that is now beside me.

She pointed to the first page that says "thoughtful men in every country warn that we are in mortal danger of destroying ourselves on several fronts and especially through nuclear war, environmental pollution, population growth and poverty."

Problems on all those fronts are planetary in scope, she insisted. "Each threatens human survival."

World Federalists are convinced "that the world is at historic crossroads when new global institutions, capable of achieving just solutions to the enormous problems of our age, must be established soon if catastrophe is to be averted."

World problems call for world resolutions, they urge. Boyce Gaddes told me recently that main project of the Victoria branch for 1975 is the taping of a series of panel talks reviewing world problems, assessing needs and proposing solutions. Speakers are being drawn from many fields of professional and public life.

When completed, in the next month or so, the series will be given to the public through Victoria's Channel 10 — on dates and at times yet to be set.

World Federalists of Canada maintains contact with government officials, the Canadian World Federalist Parliamentary Association and the World Association of World Federalists which coordinates the work of other federalist associations in many nations around the world.

Violence Aftermath of Bowl Victory

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Disorder erupted among about 11,000 football fans celebrating Pittsburgh's Super Bowl victory Sunday night. Bottles and beer cans were thrown at police, 60 persons were injured and police arrested 250 persons for being drunk in the streets or disorderly. Policemen in riot gear moved in and closed off the downtown area to incoming traffic. Order was restored by 10 p.m. EST.

"It is worse than we had anticipated," city police superintendent Robert Colville said.

The celebration began peacefully after the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-6 Super Bowl win over Minnesota. But violence broke out when about 40 persons climbed atop a city bus and police moved in.

Two policemen were among the injured. One was hit by a flying beer bottle and suffered facial cuts.

The other injured officer was thrown to the ground in front of a gushing fire hydrant and was kicked by several persons when he was cut off from other police by the crowd. The officer was found lying in a pool of water "and could have drowned," police said.

No one was hurt seriously. "There are a lot of teenagers down here who got their hands on some alcohol," Colville said.

Five hundred police moved in on the crowd. Officers closed off main artery exits and secured most street corners in the downtown area.

Colville said he decided to close off the area "when it became apparent that people's lives were endangered."

He cited as an example the stopping of a bus in the Market Square area while more than 40 men piled on top. Colville said there was concern that the bus might tip over, causing injury to passengers inside.

Police said in view of Sunday night's outburst, they were not looking forward to today's official victory parade in the downtown area.

"We're preparing for the worst," a police spokesman said. "We had no idea how bad it could get."

A national weather service forecast of from six to 12 inches of snow by midmorning promised to keep many celebrants indoors, but officials were preparing for a parade crowd of 300,000.

Many businesses announced early closing hours and the courts cancelled sessions for the 2 p.m. EST parade. Public school students will be permitted to leave class early if they have written parental permission.

TEN DROWNED in the wreck of Polish fishing trawler BRDA, now lying off a pier at Helsingør, Denmark. The 10 Polish fishermen lost their lives when a violent storm smashed the trawler against one pier. Danish army helicopters rescued 17 crew members.

Auto Men Cut Week For Jobs

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Members of Local 195, United Auto Workers, have voted by a 6-to-1 margin in favor of working a three-week month to preserve the jobs of 231 workers at the Kelsey-Hayes Canada Ltd. plant.

The company had planned to lay off 81 workers indefinitely today and another 150 at the end of the month. Since November 298 workers have been laid off because of a decline in the auto industry.

The auto-parts manufacturer, which employs 720 workers under normal conditions, approved of the plan to work three weeks and to close for the fourth.

Paul Hansen, Local 195 financial secretary, said it was a case of all the workers sharing the misery rather than half of them losing their jobs.

He said the plan, that sets aside certain sections of the collective agreement, will be in effect until April.

If the economy of the auto industry has not picked up by then, the union members have given the company their approval to continue the arrangement.

Pipeline, Land Confusion Angers Indians, Eskimos

OTTAWA (CP)—Indian and Eskimo organizations in the Northwest Territories, angered by weekend statements by Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, said Sunday they were uncertain whether to continue legal arguments based on land claims against the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline.

"Has the federal government already decided what it set up the Berger commission to determine?" asked the Northwest Territories Indian Brotherhood and Inuit Tapiriast Eskimo Brotherhood in a joint news release.

The reference was to hearings to begin March 3 by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of the British Columbia Supreme Court on an application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. for a right-of-way through the Canadian North for the line which is to deliver Alaska and Mackenzie Delta gas to southern Canada and the United States.

The natives say the line should not be built until their land claims are settled.

Judge Berger is to determine the social, environmental and economic impacts the pipeline might have on Northern Canada and also to recommend what conditions the federal government might impose in granting such a right-of-way.

In Yellowknife Friday, Buchanan set up a federal-territorial study group to consider proposals by three major oil companies that want to install feeder lines if the pipeline is approved.

Buchanan said that, while the proposal is to be made known to Judge Berger, "it is not my intention to refer this application to the Berger inquiry for specific advice."

In their release, the native groups noted that Judge Berger already has said it would be essential, in view of the land claims, for him to consider gathering lines for the main pipeline.

"It will be the responsibility of the commission to consider the location and extent of gas fields in the Mackenzie Delta and the Beaufort Sea. . . ."

The Indian and Eskimo groups said Buchanan's statement was another example of Jill had been very quiet for quite a while, busy with pen and paper. "You know something?" she said. "You're only twice as old as I was when you were as old as I am." "So what?" Jack was quick. "Four years ago you were only a third as old as I am now," he replied. "What were their ages?" (Answer tomorrow).

Man Frozen In Calgary

CALGARY (CP) — Temperatures which dropped to 31 degrees below zero in Calgary Friday claimed the life of a 61-year-old pensioner.

James Joseph Rowan of Calgary was found frozen to death inside a downtown parkade by police.

The cold spell is the first to hit Calgary this year, and the low temperature of 31 below zero set a new record for the date and eclipsed the coldest temperature experienced during all of last winter.

The Bridge Expert

One seldom gets guarantees in the play of a hand. Nevertheless, in just about every deal, there is a right way and a wrong way of playing a hand. And the "right way" will pay a dividend more often than the "wrong way." Today's deal is a case in point.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH	EAST
♠ K Q	♠ 7
♥ 7 5 2	♥ 10 9 8 4
♦ K 10 3	♦ 0 8 6 2
♣ Q J 8 6 4	♣ 10 9 7 2

WEST: ♠ 10 8 6 5 3, ♥ J 6 3, ♦ 0 9 7 4, ♣ A 5. SOUTH: ♠ A 1 9 4 2, ♥ A K Q, ♦ A J 5, ♣ K 3.

The bidding: South West North East 2NT Pass 6NT Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Dummy's queen of spades won the opening lead, after which a low club was led, South's king falling to West's ace. A spade was returned to the board's king, East discarding the four of hearts. Declarer had just learned that West had been dealt five spades.

The queen of clubs was cashed next, and this was followed by the club jack, South and West both discarding spades. Had the six adversely-held clubs been divided 3-3, both of dummy's remaining clubs would now be winners, and declarer's slam would be there for the taking.

Next came South's three top hearts, everybody around the table following suit to all three heart leads. Since East had discarded a heart on the second spade lead, declarer had just secured a guaranteed "count" of the West hand: West was known to have been dealt exactly five spades, exactly two clubs, and exactly three hearts. Hence West had been dealt precisely three diamonds.

"Higher mathematics" now came into play. Since West had started with three diamonds, and both declarer and dummy had been dealt three apiece, East had to have started with four diamonds.

From declarer's viewpoint, he had just reached a position where he had become a favorite to take a successful finesse against the queen of diamonds: East figured to have the queen, for he who has the greater number of cards in a given suit, figures to have any one specific card in that suit.

And so, after cashing his ace, king, and queen of hearts, declarer led his five of diamonds to the board's king. He then returned the three of diamonds, and finessed his jack successfully when East followed suit with a low diamond.

Thus, once again, the "counting" of the distribution of the opponents' cards had paid a handsome dividend.

Magistrates Reforms Sought

REGINA (CP) — A former Supreme Court of Canada justice has called for radical reforms in Saskatchewan's system of magistrates' courts.

In a study commissioned by the provincial government, retired Justice Emmett Hall says magistrates' courts are the most neglected in the provincial judicial system, despite the fact they handle 90 per cent of all court proceedings involving the average citizen.

The study, released today, recommends more independence and higher salaries for judges in magistrates' courts, more support staff for them and better physical facilities.

"Except in a few places where the court has access to facilities in a some provincial courthouses, the magistrates carry on their judicial functions in an amazing variety of dance halls, legion halls, church basements and other premises which are virtually firetraps with no plumbing, erratic heating, no witness rooms, poor acoustics, all contributing to a lowering in the public mind of the administration of justice as a public function."

Support staff is just as necessary as facilities, Mr. Justice Hall says.

"At the present time in most rural areas the magistrate is judge, court clerk, reporter, collector of fines, operator of the recording device and in some instances janitor."

In addition to proposals concerning magistrates' courts, the study recommends:

—Continuing legal education for judges, with perhaps a third of all provincial judges assigned to participate each year in a program of seminars and lectures.

—Abolition of the practice of imposing court costs on persons receiving summary convictions.

—Cancellation of the appointments of all justices of the peace so that a new system of better-trained, better-paid justices of the peace can be started.

—Enlargement of the jurisdiction of the district court to include divorce and matrimonial cases and removal of the $5,000 limit on the value of lawsuits that may be tried in district court.

In his concluding remarks, Mr. Justice Hall says "What stands out as essential is a greater recognition by government that the judicial and adjudicative process requires more funding than has heretofore been made available."

In an earlier report, Mr. Justice Hall recommended that the magistrates' court system become in effect a unified family court dealing with cases ranging from juvenile delinquency to assaults by one spouse on another.

'NO LAYOFFS' FOR DOCKMEN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Interim agreements including a "no layoffs" provision have been reached by negotiators for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the employer Pacific Maritime Association, the union reported.

"Agreement has been reached that there will be no layoffs in the Pacific Coast longshore industry during the life of this new contract now being negotiated," the ILWU said in Friday's edition of its newspaper "The Dispatcher."

The ILWU, representing 13,000 dock workers, and the PMA, representing shippers, started negotiations Jan. 4 hoping to get a new contract settlement before the current 18-month pact expires June 30. Union officials hoped to conclude talks by Feb. 1.

It was reported that agreement already has been reached to continue a guaranteed pay plan for dock workers in a contract up to three years long, but the exact rate has not yet been determined.

"Our pay guarantee plan as written now allows only $6 million a year," ILWU President Harry Bridges said. "We must get the 'cap' off the plan so that our longshore people will at least have a minimum wage to sustain them."

The union said the early reopening of contract negotiations was prompted by the possibility of reinstated wage controls and "the fact that the skyrocketing cost of living was outstripping provisions of the contract."

Store Mum on Fired Women

DUNCAN — The manager of the F. W. Woolworth Company Limited store here, Thomas Pearson, refused to comment today on union charges the store is ignoring a decision of the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

He told a reporter this morning to phone the company's head office in Toronto.

The Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union said Friday the store hasn't reinstated two employees illegally dismissed for union activity last June.

The labor board, in a written decision handed down Dec. 31, ordered the reinstatement with back pay of Enid

Heavy Snow Hits Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Heavy snow blocked automobile and train traffic in much of western Japan today while a cold wave brought the lowest temperature of the season to Tokyo.

As much as 15 feet of snow fell in provinces along the Japan Sea coast causing cancellation of the 150-mile-an-hour bullet trains linking Tokyo and Osaka. Temperatures in Tokyo dropped to 20 degrees.

Officials of Niigata province said road traffic in the mountainous areas was paralyzed and the meteorological agency said 10 more feet of snow was expected to be dumped on the plains and 17 more feet in the highlands of the Japan Sea coastal province by tonight.

Foster Home Meeting Set

Foster homes are needed in Victoria for teenagers and younger-children and a meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 14 for people interested in fostering.

Sponsored by the department of human resources, the meeting will be at the Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort St., at 7:30 p.m.

Star Strike Voted Down

TORONTO (CP) — Employees in The Star's editorial, circulation, advertising and business departments were expected to be on the job as usual today after voting Sunday to accept a final company proposal.

The workers, members of the Toronto Newspaper Guild, voted 574 to 361 in favor of accepting the proposal despite a union recommendation that they strike. There are 1,800 employees in the bargaining unit.

Boxes filled with picket signs and strike literature sat piled in a corner as guild members headed home from a meeting in a downtown hotel.

The Star proposed a one-year agreement dated Jan. 2, 1975, offering weekly pay increases of from $19.58 to $42. The guild had fought weekly increases ranging from $40 for employees with salaries at or under $129.99 and $60 a week for employees with salaries at or above $269.50.

The guild also sought a four-day, 32-hour week but The Star retained its five-day, 35-hour week in the latest offer.

The company offer was submitted to the guild bargaining committee early Friday.

Star publisher Bland Honderich said he was "grateful" a strike was avoided.

"A strike would have been costly for both the company and employees," he said.

The Star is Canada's largest daily newspaper with a Monday to Friday paid circulation of 488,484 in December.

Honderich had said the paper would have published today regardless of a strike.

The workers were in a legal position to strike as of 12:01 a.m. today.

Announcement of the result of the vote came at midnight Sunday night.

Hugh Peacock, guild executive-secretary, said the bargaining committee will sign all contract clauses put forth by the company.

"We'll be back at the bargaining table in less than a year and we're obviously going to have to do more bargaining to stay even with gains made by other guild locals."

Jim Robinson, a Star reporter and president of the guild local, said he was delighted by the members' decision to accept The Star's offer.

"I still believe The Star contract is inadequate," he said.

"By the middle of the year those who voted to accept the offer will regret their decision. They'll find that they won't be able to pay for things they want because of the cost of living."

Proposed $42 increases apply to employees now earning the key rate of $269.50 or above and represent 15.6-per-cent increases retroactive to Jan. 1.

The key rate will move to $311.50 and the minimum rate for reporters with five years' experience to $322 weekly. The current rate for reporters with five years' experience is $280.

Top weekly pay rates under the Star's offer will give senior clerks $217.33, secretaries $190.74, stenographer-typists $184.59, clerk-typists $163.86, vehicle mechanics $251.22, drivers

Longshoremen Strike Vote Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Strike votes will be conducted this week among nearly 4,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union in seven B.C. ports.

Negotiations on a new contract — the former one expired Dec. 31 — are continuing with the B.C. Maritime Employers Association and Don Garcia, Canadian area president of the union, said Sunday no thought is being given at this time to a strike.

He said progress in the negotiations has been minimal so far.

The federal government, which has jurisdiction over dock work, has waived conciliation proceedings in the negotiations at the request of the union and with approval of the employers' group.

As talks resumed last week, both sides had expressed optimism that a contract would be agreed upon without strike action.

MAJOR STRIKES PLAGUE QUEBEC

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Labor Minister Jean Coutu said today to have devised a yet-undisclosed settlement to a strike by 1,200 iron workers, must still contend with requests for his intervention in two other major labor disputes.

Faced with the possibility of having to close several paper mills and lay off workers, the Association of Pulp and Paper Producers has asked the minister to restore order in the trucking industry.

A legal strike launched against 40 trucking firms Monday by about 2,500 truck drivers, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America, has forced another 2,500 drivers out of work and paralyzed highway transport.

A walkout by 311 production workers at a Texaco Canada Ltd. refinery Jan. 3 quickly spread to three other refineries, disrupting deliveries of gasoline and heating oil. A Petrochemical plant of Union Carbide Canada Ltd. also is being picketed by the strikers.

Gold Prices Rise

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices rose on European markets in slow trading today. In London, the price was set for afternoon trading at $180.25 an ounce, up 25 cents from the morning fixing.

Led by the rushing of Franco Harris and an unyielding defensive line anchored by Mean Joe Greene, Pittsburgh Steelers ended 42 years in the National Football League wilderness Sunday by winning the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

The Steelers, who had never won a championship of any kind since entering the league, held Minnesota Vikings to an incredibly minuscule 21 yards on the ground en route to a 16-6 victory. Harris set a Super Bowl record by rushing for 158 yards.

The man who waited the longest was 73-year-old Art Rooney, the Steelers' only owner who said he deserved "very little, if any of the credit," but described the victory as the biggest thrill of his life. Page 10.

It may have been Super Bowl Sunday, but other competitors in other sports performed, too.

Players from the Western Canada Hockey League's eastern and western all-star teams arrived in town for Tuesday night's annual game at Memorial Arena. They all made it in spite of brutal blizzard conditions in Manitoba and Minnesota and will be on hand for tonight's all-star dinner at the Empress hotel. Page 10.

Johnny Miller, golf's leading money winner with eight tour victories last year, is off and running again. He won the Phoenix Open Sunday by 14 strokes, the biggest margin in tour history, and his 260 total was the lowest 72-hole score in 20 years. Page 11.

ICBC SNOWED UNDER

Five inches of snow was dumped on Greater Victoria Saturday but the fallout is at the Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centre on Douglas Street where personnel are snowed under.

"To say the least, we are swamped," centre manager Jack Bell told the Times today.

Bell urged countless area motorists who experienced minor "fender benders" to wait until the end of the week before filing claims if their vehicles are drivable. He said anyone joining the rush would just have to wait in long lines.

The first major snowstorm of the season vanished as quickly as it appeared when warm temperatures and rain rinsed Victoria streets clean of the white mantle. Up-island communities, however, are still shovelling themselves out from under as much as 26 inches.

Local streets were clogged with minor accidents which snarled up traffic and left scores of signs and hydro poles scoured by side-sliding motorists when heavy snow fell shortly after noon.

Police departments in the area report few serious accidents while the thaw caused some problems with a rash of minor flooding.

Disruption of B.C. Hydro bus service by stalled motorists led to waits as long as two hours at some stops.

The weather office reports rain which distributed a total of 1.76 inches in the area started about 8 p.m. and besides clearing the snow, topped the rainfall record of 1.32 inches for the day, set in 1935.

A mass of warm Pacific air from the south now affects the southern tip of the island while a cold Arctic mass remains up-island.

The rain kept some municipal work crews busy.

OIL WORKERS END STRIKE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union voted Sunday to return to their jobs at Fort Nelson, one of B.C.'s two natural gas processing plants.

The men walked off the job Friday at the Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. plant in a bid for a $1.50-an-hour interim wage raise to compensate for higher living costs.

"I think we have made our point," said John Wedgewood, local union president.

Strikers rejected a formal back-to-work request Saturday, threatening a halt to all gas exports and make drastic cutbacks to B.C.'s industrial distributors.

The plant at Fort Nelson, about 600 miles northeast of Vancouver, supplies almost two thirds of B.C.'s daily natural gas output. It processes 600 million cubic feet of gas a day.

FIGHT COSTS EYE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A friendly snowball fight ended Sunday with a 29-year-old man undergoing surgery for the removal of his left eye and the setting of his broken jaw and nose.

Police said Allan M. Costello of Vancouver suffered the injuries after he was hit with a fence picket.

Investigating officers said that during a snowball fight about midnight Saturday night, a snowball hit a car in which Costello and another man were riding.

Witnesses told police the car stopped and a fight developed between the car occupants and members of the youth group.

LONG WAIT was in store for Victoria motorists this morning who took their damaged cars to Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centre at 3300 Douglas. Manager Jack Bell said the centre was "swamped"

and urged motorists to come in later this week if their vehicles are still mobile. Scores of minor accidents occurred throughout Greater Victoria after Saturday's snow.

Barrett's Gas Price Plan Unfair—U.S. Senators

SEATTLE — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was urged by two Washington State senators to review natural gas price increases proposed by Premier Dave Barrett.

Senators Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson appeared in a telegram for Kissinger to "stop the unfair treatment" of U.S. natural gas customers and to review existing agreements between Canada and the U.S.

Barrett Friday proposed to Ottawa that the export price of natural gas be increased to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet by the end of 1975.

The senators' telegram said: "These Canadian actions are creating an intolerable burden on U.S. consumers. We desire to maintain the historic spirit of co-operation between the U.S. and Canada but the discriminatory actions by Canadian authorities must be ended."

John McMillan, board chairman of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, said the proposed increase is "a totally unjustified drain on the energy economy of the Pacific Northwest."

McMillan said American and Canadian natural gas users and Canadian gas producers are caught in the middle of a struggle between Barrett and the federal government.

He said that since the struggle over revenues intensified several years ago, Northwest has received only about half the 890 million cubic feet a day of gas for which it has contracted.

Barrett said in an interview following an NDP constituency meeting in Coquitlam Sunday that all the province wants is to charge U.S. customers the same price that they now pay for natural gas from Louisiana.

The main problem, he said, is the difficulty that democratic governments face in enacting unpopular measures that might lower the living standards of their voters.

He praised efforts by Western governments to arrange loans, energy-sharing, and other assistance to help any ally that "suffered heavily" from the oil or economic crises.

Luns said the Atlantic alliance is far more unified than it was one year ago.

He said he "appreciated" President Ford's continued support of NATO and added, "what you heard a couple of years ago about Europe going it alone (with a) European defence has completely disappeared in all countries of the alliance."

Ford said Sunday in an interview with Time Magazine he agreed with the Kissinger view. "I stand by the view that Henry Kissinger expressed in the 'Business Week' (interview)," Ford was quoted by Time.

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The secretary general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization says the West may use force to break a new Arab oil boycott.

"I would say any nation," faced with strangulation, is likely to consider the use of force," NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns said in a recent interview with United Press International.

Luns backed up a similar warning by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger earlier in the month and broke with the soft-line approach of European Common Market president Francois-Xavier Ortoli.

Kissinger, in an interview with Business Week, said the United States may use force if "there is some actual strategy of isolation of this industrialized world." But Ortoli called force "an hypothesis I cannot possibly envisage."

Luns said the European doves may change their minds if a new oil boycott comes about. "It has rarely been in history that a country accepts being strangled without taking some counter-measures," he said.

"People who have now a very clear voice about certain problems, because it's a case that has not yet happened, might, of course, when they are strangled, have other voices," he said.

Luns said, however, he did not have the impression that the Arab states are contemplating something which might in fact strangle the economies of Western Europe or of North America.

"I think the Soviets are realistic enough not to wish that, also because of the implications," he said.

Luns warned that the economic crisis might "spill over" into the political area and endanger Western democracy.

Bazooka Attack Slams Jetliner

Times News Services

PARIS—Two men coolly unwrapped a bazooka from its orange cover today and fired four Soviet-made rockets toward an El Al Boeing 707 jet liner taxiing for takeoff from Orly field with 140 persons aboard.

They missed and hit a Yugoslav airliner that had just landed on a flight from Zagreb.

The steward of the Yugoslav airliner and a French policeman posted at the airport were wounded by fragments of the shell and a hostess aboard the Yugoslav airlines DC9 was treated for shock.

The attack came at 12:30 p.m. Paris time when the Yugoslav plane had just finished unloading passengers upon its arrival from Zagreb, and as the Boeing 707 began to move down the runway for takeoff for New York and Toronto.

Sources close to the interior ministry said police were working on the theory the attack was staged by political extremists.

Arab extremists have carried out at least six attacks against El Al planes in recent years.

And, on Jan. 26, 1972 Croatian nationalists opposed to the Tito regime exploded a bomb aboard a Yugoslav plane, killing 26 of the 27 persons aboard.

Police said that on the basis of reports by witnesses two men halted their car, rented in Southern France, on a ramp overlooking the tarmac.

One of them stepped out with a bazooka wrapped in an orange-colored cover and rapidly fired four shells.

One of the shells narrowly missed the El Al jet. One went through the Yugoslav jet and exploded outside under the wing.

A third shell failed to explode and a fourth shell hit and damaged an airfield office which was empty at the time.

"It's a miracle there hasn't been a large number of killed and wounded," one French security forces officer said.

An airfield employee who saw the attackers told police the bazooka recoiled with such force that it threw the man firing it back against his car.

After the second shot the recoil broke the window of the car, police said.

Police said the assailants left the car with two bazookas inside in a sprawling working class suburb close to Orly, and apparently continued in a taxi or a car driven by an accomplice.

An El Al spokesman said: "Our pilot accelerated rapidly as soon as he heard the first shot, which missed. This may have been the reason our plane was not hit after that."

In Beirut, a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization denounced the attack and denied that Arab guerrillas were responsible for it.

Shortly after, De Beck stepped down as clerk of the house although he remained as clerk consultant.

He had first assumed the position in 1949, after retiring at age 65 as superintendent of brokers and inspector of credit unions for the province.

He was a qualified lawyer who had practised in Vancouver before entering government service in 1937.

De Beck, who lived at 2830 Somass Drive, was a woodworker with the skill of a master craftsman. His basement was always crammed with a variety of fine woods from which he turned rings, bowls, goblets and other items.

The funeral service will be held at McCall Bros' chapel, 1400 Vancouver, at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

DE BECK... birthdays honored

Legend Leaves Chamber

A familiar black-gowned figure, frail but proud, will be starkly absent from the usual pomp and circumstance when MLAs file into the chamber of the B.C. Legislature Feb. 18 for the start of the spring session.

Edwin Keary De Beck — but he was known to all as Ned — who walked that route in ceremonial procession so often during his 24 years as clerk of the legislature, died suddenly Sunday night following a brief illness. He was aged 91.

De Beck was virtually a one-man institution in the arena of B.C. politics; his snow-topped head, lined features and twinkling eyes seemingly part of the very furniture itself.

As the man responsible under Mr. Speaker for ensuring that the house was run according to the rules, the authoritative voice on matters of procedure, he was known to and liked by generations of MLAs, pageboys and civil servants.

His birthday, March 7, always fell while the legislature was in session, and it became the custom to honor it with speeches in the house, presentations and often a birthday cake.

But there was special recognition for De Beck's 90th birthday in 1973. He was called to the bar of the house and made a Queen's Counsel, following which a newly-created members' lounge was named in his honor.

Then, as legislators drank his health, the guest of honor, flanked by Premier Barrett and then-Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, cut a huge birthday cake.

Shortly after, De Beck stepped down as clerk of the house although he remained as clerk consultant.

He had first assumed the position in 1949, after retiring at age 65 as superintendent of brokers and inspector of credit unions for the province.

He was a qualified lawyer who had practised in Vancouver before entering government service in 1937.

De Beck, who lived at 2830 Somass Drive, was a woodworker with the skill of a master craftsman. His basement was always crammed with a variety of fine woods from which he turned rings, bowls, goblets and other items.

The funeral service will be held at McCall Bros' chapel, 1400 Vancouver, at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Thieu Took $7M End-War Bribe

Binh said the opposition group had decided to release the lengthy report to the press as "further proof of President Thieu's illegal money activities."

The document, dated Dec. 18, 1972, said Thieu initially balked at a $2 million cash offer and the promise of a villa in Hawaii. He came around when the United States gave another $5 million to "Mrs. Thieu's Charity Fund" and the money was deposited by Thieu and his wife in Basel, Switzerland, it adds. As tension continued to mount on the war front, the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway left Japan today for an unknown destination, a U.S. Embassy official said in Tokyo.

The 51,000-ton Midway out of Yokosuka naval base believed bound for waters off South Vietnam where the communist forces launched massive offensives recently.

In Phnom Penh, government sources said today U.S. plants have begun an airlift to Phnom Penh to resupply the isolated Cambodian capital with military equipment.

Military sources said the Cambodian high command asked for the emergency airlift after pro-Communist rebel forces cut the Mekong River lifeline at the beginning of their current offensive New Year's eve.

The United States agreed to meet the Phnom Penh request last Saturday, the sources said, and since then U.S. Air Force C130s, piloted by civilians, have made eight or nine flights to Phnom Penh daily carrying arms and ammunition.

The flights have carried no food because Phnom Penh has enough rice and other food stockpiled to last through a one-month siege, the sources said.

Economic Pinch Discourages Local Flower Dealers

By AB KENT
Times Staff

When Christmas roses can be flown from Israel cheaper than domestic and U.S. blooms, you know there's trouble in the greenhouse business.

That's what happened this season thanks to North American inflation and the economies of scale in overseas operations.

Local growers and flower dealers agree the costs of raising flower crops here are reaching the point of discouragement, and like southern Ontario, many growers have left the business or are turning to more lucrative greenhouse crops.

Few are in the position of Raymond Perks, of Perks Florist and Garden Centre, who raises his own stock and retails it, enabling him to survive longer by adjusting his selling prices.

But retailers working through a wholesaler are finding the selling price can take only a marginal hike compared with the doubling and tripling of production costs, due to the risk of pricing flowers into the luxury category.

Victoria Times

SECOND SECTION

When cut flower prices go too high, nobody buys, dealers find.

The trend is toward declining profit for growers who have tried switching into the potted plant business or are turning more to vegetables such as hydroponically-grown tomatoes.

And the wholesalers are buying more from the large-scale producers of the lower mainland, California and even Europe and Israel.

Perks doubts the greenhouse cut flower business will remain much longer locally.

His views are supported by one of the largest operators on Vancouver Island, Ian Vantreight, general manager of Vantreight Farms.

"It's getting more and more unfeasible to grow flowers in a greenhouse... It's becoming a non-viable industry," Vantreight said.

He blamed other factors besides the overhead, which is piling of fuel oil costs for some growers. Vantreight points to unfair competition of Dutch stock, which the government-owned KLM Dutch Airline flies for undercut prices, and to the different habits of flower-buyers in Canada.

In Europe, said said, 25 per cent of the population buys flowers to take home at least weekly. Here, fewer than 5 per cent buy flowers that frequently, and when the price jumps, sales lag.

"We've had a couple of bad years and right now the outlook is not good," Vantreight added.

Harborcrest Greenhouses said its operating costs had about doubled in the past year, especially heating and labor outlays.

To compensate, the company decided to consolidate and increase efficiency. Most of its business is direct-sale mail orders for tropicals, cactus, orchids and African violets, and the remainder is put to auction once a week at United Flower Growers co-operative in Vancouver.

Archie Bain Tropical Plants is another specialist which has been able to meet higher production costs with price increases, which are up about 10 per cent from last year. But the greenhouse grows no cut flowers, just potted house plants.

Murray Saunders, general manager of Jones Wholesale Floral Co. Ltd., finds that over the last five years his firm is getting only about half what it used to obtain from local growers, but some of this apparent shrinkage is brought about by a rise in the firm's volume of business.

Demand for potted plants before Christmas was strong, and in addition to local sources, Jones bought 5,000 pots from lower mainland growers.

Local cut flower production is limited almost entirely to the spring varieties such as daffodils and tulips, and for the other staples such as carnations, chrysanthemums and gladiolus, Jones turns to California.

The roses for Christmas came from Israel because the quality was high, delivery quicker and the cost about two-thirds of California prices, Saunders said.

He thinks the market here could support one large, first-class flower-growing operation in Victoria. But the capital costs are too formidable.

Land is both scarce and expensive to buy, and at $7 a square foot to construct, a 50,000 square foot minimum size greenhouse would cost $350,000—prohibitive for most growers.

Vantreight has ideas for more efficient, semi-automated flower-growing, but greenhouses for these facilities would be even more costly, running well into the millions.

To pay even the interest on such amounts of borrowed money would require more revenue than the undertaking is likely to generate, he said.

Consumers today, said Vantreight, are enjoying the benefits of previous cheaper land and other capital costs. To try to set up a new greenhouse undertaking today is "just not economic," he said.

One factor heavily in favor of operators giving up flowers is the fact that the government assures income for producers of food crops like tomatoes, in exchange for a small premium.

If a grower loses on a flower crop, he absorbs the loss all by himself. If a tomato crop fails he at least comes out with a certain amount of insurance benefits.

Heat for Cold Wedlock The Old-Fashioned Way

Honestly, I did not intend to inflict on you a second essay about marriage, but I have before me a booklet sent along by a woman reader in the James Bay district who, noting my reference to 37 years in the ring, writes, "This advice has been helpful in my own 40 years of marriage and may be worth passing along to your readers." Darned if I don't think she's right.

The booklet is under the somewhat surprising patronage of the British Medical Association, is titled simply, "Getting Married" and contains some advice from its editor, one Dr. Harvey Flack, that seems highly unlikely from a medical man, though it may be just what the doctor ordered.

"Love may not conquer all," writes Dr. Flack, clearly a fine, sentimental fellow, "but just being in love makes a lot of problems fall into perspective and the most desperate difficulty can look very small skittles if you hold each other close."

"Getting married is still the most exciting thing any two young people can do," he goes on. "They should remember that kissing is the way to ease stress and discord. I would recommend it when mother-in-law troubles beset a couple. And middle-aged couples should kiss more often."

"I have been recommending kissing as a cure for marriage troubles for many years," he concludes. "Most other doctors agree with me."

And so, within reason, do I.

True, there are some couples who have so many troubles that if they relied on this therapy to ease them all they might well spend the rest of their lives locked in an embrace which, if nothing else, could be mighty fatiguing.

Still, I think what Dr. Flack has in mind is not so much the actual salutes of love as it is the maintenance of romance in matrimony. Without that the kiss is cold comfort.

It has come to be the custom in North America to think of marriage much as we think of the two-stage rocket. The first stage is spectacular, full of the fireworks and excitement that make the early years of most marriages a continuance of the love affairs that began them. The second, or orbit, stage is predictable. The affair becomes a partnership. The romance, becomes a working arrangement. The marriage goes on its way, making bleep-bleep-bleep sounds, until the end.

This sort of thing can be comfortable and, having adjusted their own personalities to each other, which is a necessity in every marriage, the husband and wife may arrive at complete compatibility. But all too often it extinguishes the flame of the blast-off that got it on its way. Without that heat a marriage may lose a lot of its meaning.

Dr. Flack's advice may sound rather embarrassing to a people as undemonstrative as we are in these northern climes.

I fancy that if some conscience-stricken husband, reading this on the homeward bound bus tonight, were to put it into practice his wife might phone instantly to the nearest constabulary or psychiatrist.

But it could be a reminder to most of us, which I fancy is the aim of my James Bay reader, that we're guilty of some neglect in keeping alive the romantic aspect of our marriages.

If you asked any honest group of people if they felt that they were really working at marriage, as they work at careers or bowling scores, for example, you'd doubtless get a pretty thin show of hands.

One can speculate on how many cooling or cold marriages could be warmed up if the husband were to spend as much time and energy on the job as he spends cutting down his golf handicap. Or how many might recapture some of the old magic if a wife were to concentrate less on her house-keeping and more on those charms that got her the lout in the first place.

There are many other suggestions in the booklet, including one by a Dr. Dick Glover who contends that wives should be paid a regular salary by their husbands, but if kisses will do it we need not go into other radical ideas.

City Shoplifters Aren't Stealing The Necessities

Times Staff

Is the inflation-recession squeeze forcing Victoria residents to shoplift to provide for their loved ones?

Nonsense, say police and security officials.

For one thing, Victoria's shoplifters aren't stealing the necessities of life they can't afford to buy.

"They're taking pocket calculators, lipsticks, sweaters, even skis."

"Some of your best-dressed people are shoplifters," a security officer for one of the city's major downtown department stores said wryly in an interview.

They can afford to be — they don't pay for their clothes.

For another thing, local shoplifters aren't always hard up for cash.

Almost all adults and many juveniles caught shoplifting have enough money to pay for the stolen item, said Detective Inspector Richard Ward of the Victoria police.

"It seems to be a kind of sickness with people," he said. They seem to be overwhelmed with the temptation to get something for nothing.

The security officer, who asked that his name be withheld, said shoplifters range from age nine to 90, and include housewives, doctors, lawyers, people on welfare, and teenagers.

Biggest single group is probably unemployed young people around 18 to 20, he said.

"There are people who live off the stores," he said.

These are the ones who steal items, then return them to the store for a cash refund.

Security officers try to co-operate to keep an eye on known shoplifters, and warn each other when any are headed toward their store, he said.

Then there are the teenaged girls who steal clothes to keep up with their peers at school, the transients who pick up a few items, the tourists who steal a memento or two of Victoria.

The downtown stores are the hardest hit by shoplifting.

Most of them now prosecute everyone they catch stealing, whether it's a fur coat or a bottle of shampoo.

A store away from downtown like Woodward's, for example, suffers much less, according to a Woodward's spokesman.

In fact, he thinks Woodward's losses from stealing have actually declined in recent years.

Probable reason, he said, is the $250 fines the courts are now giving convicted shoplifters.

Yet everyone admits the roughly 500 shoplifting cases the Victoria police handle each year represent a tiny fraction of the stealing that goes on.

The self-service store has made shoplifting comparatively easy. And in the crush of Christmas shoppers, swiping items off store counters is even easier, so the holiday season was the time of greatest loss for stores.

In the United States, where both crime and the recession are worse than in Victoria, shoplifting this year has become one of the fastest-growing crimes, costing merchants $5 billion annually.

Some police officials and businessmen there are convinced that the recession has had much to do with the rise.

Both of Victoria's general hospitals are crowded today and the administrator at one of them said quality of patient care must be affected eventually if pressure experienced recently continues.

At one point last week patients who had to be admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital were being temporarily housed two at a time in treatment rooms.

"We even had to put one old soul in a linen closet — of course they were out to lunch (under anesthesia) so it didn't bother them," said one nurse.

At Victoria General Hospital today, half a dozen cases of elective surgery had to be cancelled to make beds available for emergency and urgent cases.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee, detailed today one 24-hour period last week in which 29 of the 120 patients seen in the emergency department had to be admitted to hospital.

From 4 p.m. to midnight that day 58 patients were treated in emergency and 18 of them, far above average, had to be admitted.

At one stage, he said, six people were waiting in emergency rooms for hospital beds. Two of the six were unconscious from drug overdoses and on respirators, two with chest pains were potential heart attack cases, one had a severe head injury and one was an acute abdominal emergency.

While it's no hardship for a patient to be located in a treatment room, a sort of base station where nurses prepare medication, it complicates the work done there no end, said Pickles. In some situations there were two patients in a treatment room.

"It puts a very severe stress on the staff," he said. "You can get through by everyone pitching in but if it continued, in the long haul it's bound to effect patient care eventually."

The medical, surgical and pediatrics wards of the hospital are full today, as are the intensive care and coronary care units as well as Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care, he added.

John Murray, assistant executive director at Victoria General, said the hospital is also full and particularly busy in the emergency department today.

Most cases there involve elderly people with pneumonia and complications and there is also an unusual number of suspected cancer cases.

As last week, elective surgery, meaning non-emergency operations, had to be cancelled to make room for them, he said.

Noise Prompts Tree Plan

Corrine Bush intends to plant trees to beautify Craigflower Road and muffle traffic noise—even if it means purchasing those trees herself.

Bush, 1320 Coventry Ave., is being assisted by her husband Henry Edwards, in planning boulevard planting.

"Craigflower is a major artery," he said. "The noise from that road is tremendous and the area is solid residential."

"There's a terrific noise pollution problem."

"It's nobody's fault that the problem is there, but nobody's doing anything about it either."

They believe that elm trees planted now would successfully suppress traffic sounds in about five years.

"There's no question—there's really suppress noise," said Edwards. Bush has already priced 14-foot elm and maple trees and says, "We'll buy them in lots of 10, for $50 to $60."

"But you can't plant on a parkway without permission," she said.

She wrote Victoria city officials last fall and received a cautious reply indicating the matter would be considered in January. Bush is now awaiting further reply from the city parks department.

"Neighborhoods always look better with trees," she said. "All it takes is a little bit of foresight."

If permission is granted, the first trees would likely be planted on Craigflower near Coventry, spaced between small chestnut trees already growing in some spots.

"Eventually I'd like to do all of Craigflower," said Bush. "It could be a very pretty street."

In lieu of permission she would welcome a decision by the city to take over the planting project but said she would gladly bear both the cost and time to do it herself.

"One person can do so much," she said.

Janitors Favor Workload Pact

Janitors employed by Greater Victoria school board voted in favor Sunday of an agreement on workloads and end a dispute which resulted in two closures of night school rentals last fall.

The agreement, tentatively negotiated last Friday with the assistance of two Relations Board, provides for members of the B.C. Labor no change in present staffing, extra time for servicing rentals and adjustment of man-hours in any school by mutual agreement.

The agreement must also be ratified by the school board but this is expected because board representatives are recommending approval.

Bob Cunningham, vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said union members also approved a new wage position to be presented to the board in a mediation meeting Tuesday.

However, he added, union members were not unanimous. "We have come down far more than the members would have liked to have seen," he said.

He declined to release the wage proposal until it is presented to the school board Tuesday.

Not-Guilty Plea In Break-In Case

A 22-year-old man pleaded not guilty today in Provincial Court to eight counts of breaking and entering within a three-day period.

Murray S. Morin, address not known, was charged with breaking into eight Victoria and Saanich service stations between Wednesday and Friday of last week.

Trial will be Feb. 12. Judge William Ostler released Morin on $500 bail and ordered him to obey a midnight curfew until trial is over.

Led by the rushing of Franco Harris and an unyielding defensive line anchored by Mean Joe Greene, Pittsburgh Steelers ended 42 years in the National Football League wilderness Sunday by winning the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

The Steelers, who had never won a championship of any kind since entering the league, held Minnesota Vikings to an incredibly minuscule 21 yards on the ground en route to a 16-6 victory. Harris set a Super Bowl record by rushing for 158 yards.

The man who waited the longest was 73-year-old Art Rooney, the Steelers' only owner who said he deserved "very little, if any of the credit," but described the victory as the biggest thrill of his life. Page 10.

It may have been Super Bowl Sunday, but other competitors in other sports performed, too.

Players from the Western Canada Hockey League's eastern and western all-star teams arrived in town for Tuesday night's annual game at Memorial Arena. They all made it in spite of brutal blizzard conditions in Manitoba and Minnesota and will be on hand for tonight's all-star dinner at the Empress Hotel. Page 10.

Johnny Miller, golf's leading money winner with eight tour victories last year, is off and running again. He won the Phoenix Open Sunday by 14 strokes, the biggest margin in tour history, and his 260 total was the lowest 72-hole score in 20 years. Page 11.

Blizzards, Tornadoes Kill Thirty

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Winter storms which buffeted Manitoba, Ontario and swept across central and southern U.S. states have left more than 30 persons dead in their wake.

Residents of southern Manitoba began returning to their normal working and living routines today after the worst blizzard in nearly a decade.

The storm brought all but the most essential outside activities to a halt. It also contributed to the deaths of at least two persons and threatened the lives of hundreds of others in Manitoba and northwestern Ontario.

Hundreds of motorists stranded in both Manitoba and northwestern Ontario took refuge wherever possible.

Others were not so fortunate. A CNR switchman was killed Friday when he was struck by a train while working at the company's Symington Yards in Winnipeg, a Winnipeg resident suffered a fatal heart attack while shovelling snow, and a young Winnipeg girl missing since Friday had still not been found.

Meanwhile an icy chill lingered over the snow-clogged midsection of the U.S. where a raging winter storm left more than a score of persons dead and tornadoes raked Georgia and Florida, adding to the death toll.

One twister roared through Panama City, Fla., ripping through a row of house trailers and homes and leaving a 1-week-old girl dead and three other persons injured. The tornado damaged several house trailers and homes, downed power lines and overturned a two-ton truck.

Other tornadoes buzzed nine southwestern Georgia counties, injuring six persons and causing considerable damage.

The snowstorm battered the midwest during the weekend and piled up 1-foot snowdrifts. It swept across the south and the Ohio valley Sunday and early today, dumping a five-inch blanket of snow from Texas to Mississippi.

The Tennessee highway patrol closed the southbound lanes of Interstate 24 at Montreat Sunday morning, leaving several hundred motorists just "sitting there going nowhere," a spokesman said. The road was reopened later in the day.

The rain kept some municipal work crews busy.

GOV'T HOUSING RENTS TO RISE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. government is raising the rent in provincial public housing projects, David Davies, chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission, said today.

Davies said the government intends to raise rent in stages until it reaches 25 per cent of each family's income.

The increases may be more than the 10.6 per cent allowable under the Landlord and Tenant Act for 1975 but the provincial housing commission is exempt from this rent increase ceiling, he said.

For 1975 the following ceilings will be set on the increases:

—$10 a month for any senior citizen living alone.

—$20 a month for a senior citizen couple, a family on welfare, or a family with one or two wage earners.

—$40 a month for any other family with three or more working people.

FIGHT COSTS EYE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A friendly snowball fight ended Sunday with a 23-year-old man undergoing surgery for the removal of his left eye and the setting of his broken jaw and nose.

Police said Allan M. Costello of Vancouver suffered the injuries after he was hit with a fence picket.

Investigating officers said that during a snowball fight about midnight Saturday night, a snowball hit a car in which Costello and another man were riding.

Witnesses told police the car stopped and a fight developed between the car occupants and members of the youth group.

LONG WAIT was in store for Victoria motorists this morning who took their damaged cars to Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims centre at 3300 Douglas. Manager Jack Bell said the centre was "swamped"

and urged motorists to come in later this week if their vehicles are still mobile. Scores of minor accidents occurred throughout Greater Victoria after Saturday's snow.

Bazooka Attack Slams Jetliner

Times News Services

PARIS—Two men coolly unwrapped a bazooka from its orange cover today and fired four Soviet-made rockets toward an El Al Boeing 707 jet liner taxiing for takeoff from Orly field with 140 persons aboard.

They missed and hit a Yugoslav airliner that had just landed on a flight from Zagreb.

The steward of the Yugoslav airliner and a French policeman posted at the airport were wounded by fragments of the shell and a hostess aboard the Yugoslav airline's DC9 was treated for shock.

The attack came at 12:30 p.m. Paris time when the Yugoslav plane had just finished unloading passengers upon its arrival from Zagreb, and as the Boeing 707 began to move down the runway for take-off for New York and Toronto.

Sources close to the interior ministry said police were working on the theory the attack was staged by political extremists.

Arab extremists have carried out at least six attacks against El Al planes in recent years.

And, on Jan. 26, 1972 Croatian nationalists opposed to the Tito regime exploded a bomb aboard a Yugoslav plane, killing 26 of the 27 persons aboard.

Police said that on the basis of reports by witnesses two men halted their car, rented in Southern France, on a ramp overlooking the tarmac.

One of them stepped out with a bazooka wrapped in an orange-colored cover and rapidly fired four shells.

One of the shells narrowly missed the El Al jet. One went through the Yugoslav jet and exploded outside under the wing.

A third shell failed to explode and a fourth shell hit and damaged an airfield office which was empty at the time.

"It's a miracle there hasn't been a large number of killed and wounded," one French security forces officer said.

An airfield employee who saw the attackers told police the bazooka recoiled with such force that it threw the man firing it back against his car.

After the second shot the recoil broke the window of the car, police said.

Police said the assailants left the car with two bazookas inside in a sprawling working class suburb close to Orly, and apparently continued in a taxi or a car driven by an accomplice.

An El Al spokesman said: "Our pilot accelerated rapidly as soon as he heard the first shot, which missed. This may have been the reason our plane was not hit after that."

In Beirut, a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization denounced the attack and denied that Arab guerrillas were responsible for it.

Legend Leaves Chamber

A familiar black-gowned figure, frail but proud, will be starkly absent from the usual pomp and circumstance when MLAs file into the chamber of the B.C. Legislature Feb. 18 for the start of the spring session.

Edwin Keary De Beck — but he was known to all as Ned — who walked that route in ceremonial procession so often during his 24 years as clerk of the legislature, died suddenly Sunday night following a brief illness. He was aged 91.

De Beck was virtually a one-man institution in the arena of B.C. politics, his snow-topped head, lined features and twinkling eyes seemingly part of the very furniture itself.

As the man responsible under Mr. Speaker for ensuring that the house was run according to the rules, the authoritative voice on matters of procedure, he was known to and liked by generations of MLAs, pageboys and civil servants.

His birthday, March 7, always fell while the legislature was in session, and it became the custom to honor it with speeches in the house, presentations and often a birthday cake.

But there was special recognition for De Beck's 90th birthday in 1973. He was called to the bar of the house and made a Queen's Counsel, following which a newly-created members' lounge was named in his honor.

Then, as legislators drank his health, the guest of honor, flanked by Premier Barrett and then-Opposition leader W. A. Bennett, cut a huge birthday cake.

Shortly after, De Beck stepped down as clerk of the house although he remained as clerk consultant.

He had first assumed the position in 1949, after retiring at age 65 as superintendent of brokers and inspector of credit unions for the province.

He was a qualified lawyer, who had practised in Vancouver before entering government service in 1937.

De Beck, who lived at 2830 Somass Drive, was a woodworker with the skill of a master craftsman. His basement was always crammed with a variety of fine woods from which he turned rings, bowls, goblets and other items.

The funeral service will be held at McCall Bros.' chapel, 1400 Vancouver, at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Barrett's Gas Price Plan Unfair—U.S. Senators

Times News Services

SEATTLE — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been urged by two Washington State senators to review natural gas price increases proposed by Premier Dave Barrett.

Senators Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson appeared in a telegram for Kissinger, to "stop the unfair treatment" of U.S. natural gas customers and to review existing agreements between Canada and the U.S.

Barrett Friday proposed to Ottawa that the export price of natural gas be increased to $1.93 per thousand cubic feet by the end of 1975.

The senators' telegram said: "These Canadian actions are creating an intolerable burden on U.S. consumers. We desire to maintain the historic spirit of co-operation between the U.S. and Canada but the discriminatory actions by Canadian authorities must be ended."

John McMillan, board chairman of Northwest Pipeline Corp. of Salt Lake City, said the proposed increase is "a totally unjustified drain on the energy economy of the Pacific Northwest."

McMillan said American and Canadian natural gas users and Canadian gas producers are caught in the middle of a struggle between Barrett and the federal government.

He said that since the struggle over revenues intensified several years ago, Northwest has received only about half the $90 million cubic feet a day of gas for which it has contracted.

Barrett said in an interview following an NDP constituency meeting in Coquitlam Sunday that all the province wants is to charge U.S. customers the same price that they now pay for natural gas from Louisiana.

"The RCMP never condones illegal or unethical practices in any segment of its operations," Willes said in response to charges made on the CTV network program W5 aired Sunday.

Calif. Shaken

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A sharp earthquake shook Southern California this morning, the second in as many days. There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries. Police departments in Southern Los Angeles County and Northeastern Orange County reported calls from residents throughout the area. The Los Angeles County sheriff's station at Lakewood described it as "two distinct movements with about 60 seconds of rumbling in between."

Ford On Television

Luns Echoes Arab 'Force' Warning

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The secretary general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization says the West may use force to break a new Arab oil boycott.

"I would say any nation, faced with strangulation, is likely to consider the use of force," NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns said in a recent interview with United Press International.

Luns backed up a similar warning by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger earlier in the month and broke with the soft-line approach of European Common Market president Francois-Xavier Ortoli.

Kissinger, in an interview with Business Week, said the United States may use force if "there is some actual strangulation of the industrialized world." But Ortoli called "an hypothesis I cannot possibly envisage."

Luns said the European doves may charge their minds if a new oil boycott comes about. "It has rarely been in history that a country accepts being strangled without taking some counter-measures," he said.

"People who have now a very clear voice about certain problems, because it's a case that has not yet happened, might, of course, when they are strangled, have other voices," he said.

Luns said, however, he did "not have the impression that the Arab states are contemplating something which might in fact strangle the economies of Western Europe or of North America."

"I think the Soviets are realistic enough not to wish that, also because of the implications," he said.

Luns warned that the economic crisis might "spill over" into the political area and endanger Western democracy.

The main problem, he said, is the difficulty that democratic governments face in enacting unpopular measures that might lower the living standards of their voters.

He praised efforts by Western governments to arrange loans, energy-sharing, and other assistance to help any ally that "suffered heavily" from the oil or economic crises.

Luns said the Atlantic alliance is far more unified than it was one year ago.

He said he "appreciated" President Ford's continued support of NATO and added, "what you heard a couple of years ago about Europe going it alone (with a) European defence has completely disappeared in all countries of the alliance."

Ford said Sunday in an interview with Time Magazine he agreed with the Kissinger view.

"I stand by the view that Henry Kissinger expressed in the 'Business Week' (interview)," Ford was quoted by Time.

A group of opposition politicians in Saigon said today the United States paid President Nguyen Van Thieu a $7 million bribe to get him to accept the 1973 Vietnam peace agreement.

Congressman Nguyen Van Binh, a spokesman for the politicians, said the charges were contained in a document drafted by South Vietnamese expatriates living in the United States.

Binh said the opposition group had decided to release the lengthy report to the press as "further proof of President Thieu's illegal money activities."

The document, dated Dec. 15, 1972, said Thieu initially balked at a $2 million cash offer and the promise of a villa in Hawaii. He came around when the United States gave another $3 million to "Mrs. Thieu's Charity Fund" and the money was deposited by Thieu and his wife in Basel, Switzerland, it adds.

As tension continued to mount on the war front, the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway left Japan today for an unknown destination, a U.S. Embassy official said in Tokyo.

The 51,000-ton Midway off of Yokosuka naval base is believed bound for waters off South Vietnam where the communist forces launched massive offensives recently.

In Phnom Penh, government sources said today U.S. plants have begun an airlift to Phnom Penh to resupply the isolated Cambodian capital with military equipment.

Military sources said the Cambodian high command asked for the emergency airlift after pro-Communist rebel forces cut the Mekong River lifeline at the beginning of their current offensive New Year's eve.

The United States agreed to meet the Phnom Penh request last Saturday, the sources said, and since then U.S. Air Force C130s, piloted by civilians, have made eight or nine flights to Phnom Penh daily carrying arms and ammunition.

The flights have carried no food because Phnom Penh has enough rice and other food stockpiled to last through a one-month siege, the sources said.

Canadian Makes It a 'Shoe-In'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Imagine the Super Bowl game being decided by a pair of shoes from Montreal?

You'd be surprised how many of the champion Pittsburgh Steelers feel that it was.

Unsung hero in this behind-the-scenes success story is Tony Parisi, the Steelers' equipment man for the past 10 years.

It occurred to him that it might ruin before Sunday's game, which it did, and that Tulane Stadium's artificial turf might be slick and slippery, which it was.

So Parisi, 41, a transplanted Canadian acting strictly on his own, ordered 75 pairs of shoes with special rubber cleats from Montreal.

"God knows where he found those shoes, but a lot of us wore them and it was as if they came from heaven," said linebacker Andy Russell, captain of the Steelers defensive unit.

"They made a tremendous difference out there. They were absolutely fantastic. I understand they're not even on the market yet, but I heard Tony went up to Canada, some place to get them and a lot of us wore them out there."

Russell was only one of many Steelers players who wore the shoes after they slipped and slid through the first half.

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw also tried them and praised them, as did Franco Harris.

"I called up the weather bureau earlier in the week, asked for the long range forecast and was told there was a good chance there would be a lot of rain by the end of the week," Parisi explained. "I remembered us, playing in Miami four years ago and the polyturf got so slick after it rained that we had trouble. The Dolphins didn't, so I talked to their equipment man and he told me about this multi-cleated composition that he had outfitted his players with."

"That was a number of years ago, but I remembered there was something new I had heard about that still hadn't come out on the market. I did a little checking around and I found out I could get the special type shoes up in Montreal."

Mean Joe's Gang Was Never Better

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mean Joe Greene, leader of Pittsburgh Steelers' ferocious front four, finally made an old man's dream come true.

Not that Franco Harris didn't have something to do with it. After all, a Super Bowl rushing record is not to be overlooked.

But in the long run, it was Pittsburgh's front four that ultimately gave the Steelers and their 73-year-old owner, Art Rooney, their first National Football League championship after 42 years of frustration.

The Steelers dropped the Vikings 16-6 as Greene, Dwight White, Ernie Holmes and L.C. Greenwood held Minnesota to just 21 yards rushing, making the Vikings the first club to lose three Super Bowl games.

If there was any deception, it was only in the final score. The six points the Vikings got weren't really of their own making. They were the result of a blocked punt. So, in effect, the Steelers defence came up with a shutout.

"They've never played a better defensive game, never," coach Chuck Noll said. "Our defence has been fantastic all season and I think it's appropriate that they should finish things off like they did."

They finished off the Vikings not only by shutting off their running game but by turning quarterback Fran Tarkenton back into a scramble. He'd sort of lost that image in the last season or two. But in "chilly, overcast, windswept Tulane Stadium, he nearly lost a few limbs.

Tarkenton spent virtually the entire afternoon trying to avoid Greene and his linemen. Rarely did he have a chance to set up and scout around for a receiver.

And when he did throw the ball, the Steelers were usually there to spike it back down his throat, tip it away or intercept it. Of his 27 passes, only 11 wound up in a teammate's hands, the end result being 102 off the Vikings' total 123 yards.

Tarkenton had praise for the Steelers' front four:

"They are a devastating group. They were aggressive and had great penetration."

Unlike Tarkenton, Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw usually threw the ball not because he had to but because he wanted to. He completed nine of 14 attempts for 96 yards, four of them coming on a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to tight end Larry Brown that sealed the Vikings' doom.

Harris pounded out 158 yards on 34 carries, breaking the Super Bowl records of 33 carries and 135 yards by Miami's Larry Csonka. He also scored the Steelers' first touchdown on a nine-yard sweep in the third quarter.

The Steelers first points came on a safety in the second quarter when Tarkenton mishandled a pitchout and had to recover the fumble in the end zone where he was immediately surrounded by Pittsburgh tacklers.

The safety, the first in Super Bowl history, was the only scoring in the first half.

But Bradshaw was unconcerned. "We knew the defence was getting the job done and we knew they could keep on doing it. That meant we'd be getting a lot more later on. So we didn't change anything when we came in at the half. We just stuck with what we'd been doing. We knew it had to start working for us some time."

It started working the moment they got their hands on the ball in the second half, when Bill Brown of the Vikings fumbled away the kickoff. Harris boomed through the left side for 24 yards, lost three on the next play, then ran in for the touchdown and a 9-0 lead.

It stood up until Matt Blair blocked a Bobby Walden punt early in the fourth quarter and Terry Brown scooped up the ball in the end zone for the Minnesota touchdown.

Fred Cox' extra point was no good, hitting the left upright. So the Vikings trailed by three points instead of two.

The Steelers took the ensuing kickoff off, moving from their own 34-yard line, got into range for Bradshaw's touchdown pass to Brown.

They Did It For Rooney

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "They were just too good for us," said Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton after Pittsburgh Steelers whipped the Vikings 16-6 in Sunday's Super Bowl game for the National Football League championship.

But Viking defensive tackle Alan Page said in the Minnesota dressing-room he wasn't sure some of the players on his club were good enough, either.

"It doesn't bother me to lose," said Page. "What does bother me more is that we had some players who didn't want the win when it was there."

Owner Art Rooney, 73, and the only owner the Steelers have ever had, refused to take any credit because "my sons Dan and Art and coach (Chuck) Noll have been running the team."

"But this is still the greatest thrill in my life," he added.

Offensive tackle Jerry Mullins said after the team gave Rooney a game ball that "this entire team dedicated this effort at winning the Super Bowl for Mr. Rooney."

The victory left each Steeler $15,000 richer.

Viking coach Bud Grant said he wasn't sure either team played well enough to deserve the win.

Grant said officials "blew" two calls that might have cost his team the victory.

Needing about two feet to go for a first down in the third quarter, the Vikings tried to draw the Steelers off-side with a long count.

"We were going to keep our count going until they jumped offside or we got called for delay of game," Grant said.

"I looked to me like they jumped, but the officials ruled no play. They didn't call both teams offside, just no play."

The fourth quarter call came with the Steelers facing third down and two and leading 9-6. Bradshaw uncorked a 30-yard pass to Larry Brown. Defensive back Jackie Wallace nailed him, and the ball popped loose.

Purple jerseys smothered the ball, and one official ruled it was a first down for the Vikings. But he was overruled by another official, who ruled that Brown was down and the ball dead before the fumble.

Buffalo Line Disconnected?

By The Canadian Press

No sooner was Buffalo's French Connection line reunited Sunday night than another injury threatened to break up the explosive trio.

Rick Martin, playing in his first National Hockey League game after missing seven games with a thumb injury, opened the scoring at Buffalo to start the Sabres to a 5-1 victory over Vancouver Can-ucks. But centre Gil Perreault, who helped set up Martin's goal and two others by left winger Rene Robert, suffered a knee injury when he ran into a hip check by Vancouver defenceman Mike Robitaille in the third period.

Perreault was taken to hospital and there was no immediate word on the seriousness of the injury to his left knee—the same knee on which he had surgery last year.

In other NHL games Sunday, Toronto Maple Leafs edged New York Islanders 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks beat New York Rangers 4-2, Philadelphia Flyers defeated California Seals 2-1, Montreal Canadiens whipped Washington Capitals 7-2 and St. Louis Blues beat Detroit Red Wings 2-1.

Saturday, Montreal blanked Philadelphia 6-0, Boston

Bruins beat Chicago 5-1, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated California 6-3, Los Angeles Kings beat Toronto 7-5, the Rangers defeated St. Louis 5-3, Kansas City Scouts defeated Washington 5-3, Atlanta Flames and the Islanders tied 2-2, Buffalo and Detroit tied 3-3 and Vancouver's game at Minnesota was postponed because of snowstorms.

NEWCOMER SPARKS TOROS

By The Canadian Press

When Toronto Toros announced a coaching change last Friday, one man involved in the shuffle was overlooked but he didn't take long to make himself conspicuous Sunday night.

Jeff Jacques was a left winger toiling with Mohawk Valley Comets in the North American Hockey League until the Toros called him up Friday to replace Bobby Leduc, named to take over the coaching task from Billy Harris who quit at least temporarily due to family illness.

Jacques joined the Toros just an hour before their World Hockey Association game Sunday at Houston but came up with four goals in a 7-4 Toronto victory over the defending league champion Aeros.

The remainder of Sunday's WHA schedule was cut by storms in Western Canada and the United States. The Vancouver at Minnesota and Indianapolis at Winnipeg games were both postponed because of the snowstorms and Quebec Nordiques were an hour late arriving at Edmonton where they rallied for a 3-1 victory over the Oilers.

The only other game played saw Cleveland Crusaders beat Phoenix Roadrunners 4-2. (Summaries on Page 13).

No, all the tickets aren't sold but there is good news for the organizers of the Western Canada Hockey League's 10th annual all-star game.

All the players selected for Tuesday's parade of talent at Memorial Arena are expected to participate, thanks, in part, to the schedule.

Most of the players were to arrive this morning in time for team workouts.

Arrivals should include players from Manitoba's three teams in the 12-team WCHL — Flin Flon Bombers, Brandon Wheat Kings and Winnipeg Clubs.

Appearance prospects might have been more doubtful if the three teams had been at home Sunday. Winter storm hit Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan, bringing travel to a halt, as evidenced by the postponement of a World Hockey Association game in Winnipeg.

Two policemen were injured, an "appreciative" fan arrested and assault charges were being considered against two members of Brandon Wheat Kings following a wild melee during a Western Canada Hockey League game in New Westminster on Sunday.

The fight-filled game flared to serious proportions at 2:39 of the third period after the

Weather over the Prairies was such that the entire Sunday slate of four Manitoba Junior Hockey League games was wiped out and the Saskatchewan junior circuit was forced to postpone three games.

However, Manitoba's WCHL teams avoided the blizzards. Flin Flon and Winnipeg were both in Alberta and Brandon happened to be in warmer B.C. Those three clubs contribute eight players to the Eastern Division's all-stars.

Also scouting away from storms at the weekend were governors of the 12 teams. They rolled into Victoria on Sunday and promptly huddled for the first of three meetings.

One witness said police quickly moved in and one officer was holding the fan when Johnson allegedly tried to hit the fan with a stick. He missed the fan but apparently hit the policeman.

But league president Ed Chynoweth said "nothing to report" after Sunday's meeting in the Hotel Empress. Other meetings were scheduled today and again Tuesday. These, Chynoweth said, may be more significant.

The league will discuss playoff dates and probably revise the subject of expansion. Another significant topic to be discussed will be raising of the junior age limit from 19 to 20.

Victoria Cougars' Pat Ginnell, instrumental in getting the all-star game here, was feeling cheerier than he was earlier in the week when he expressed disappointment in the pre-game ticket sales.

"They're starting to move," he said. "Many fans obviously believed we were close to a sellout and weren't interested in winding up with poor seats. Sales picked up as soon as they found there are plenty of good seats left."

Tickets also are available, through the Cougar office in the Imperial Inn or at the Empress Hotel, for tonight's all-star banquet.

Among the guest speakers at the banquet in the Empress will be Babe Pratt, Vancouver Canucks' executive director in charge of story-telling, and Hall-of-Famer Red Stoeny.

Ginnell said he was also hoping to get Les Costello, one of Ontario's hockey-playing "Flying Priests." Father Costello, who played briefly with Toronto Maple Leafs before going into priesthood, happens to be visiting in Vancouver.

Mike Moser, a member of the Canadian national basketball team during the last three years, died Sunday in St. Petersburg, Fla., after he had entered hospital for treatment of what was believed to be influenza.

A spokesman for the University of Waterloo, where Moser was a student, said the university team was in Florida for an exhibition tour when Moser became ill last Thursday and was taken to hospital Friday morning.

An autopsy was to be performed to determine cause of death.
